Sweepstakes king says it's skill — not luck

Wesley Hurley is America's "Sweepstakes King" — each year he wins hundreds and hundreds of free prizes.

But Hurley says he isn't exceptionally lucky.

He spends hours every day looking for new contests, carefully filling out entry forms and licking miles of stamps.

"I win because I follow the contest rules carefully," he told The NEWS. "Two percent of the people who enter contests win 100 percent of the prizes because they follow directions precisely.

"If the rules say to print your name in the upper right and you type it in or write it in longhand, you can legally be disqualified.

"If they tell you to put your entry on a 3-inch by 5-inch card and you put it on a different size, it can be thrown out."

Hurley, who lives in Biloxi, Miss., and returns around the country on winning sweepstakes, got hooked 13 years ago when he decided to find out if those promotions were really on the level.

He won his first prize, a black and white TV, after 12 months of unsuccessful tries, and only once over the years has he ever encountered a company that didn't live up to its promises of prizes.

The most valuable prize he's received was a $9,000 camper he's also won a Ford Mustang, Pinto and pickup truck, a pool table, bicycles, cameras, cash prizes of $200 to $5,000 and a bushel of flower seeds.

Wesley Hurley and his wife, Evelyn, pose amidst a tiny portion of his incredible sweepstakes winnings.

Hurley offers these tips to improve your chances of being a sweepstakes winner:

- Send in as many entries as possible, one each day.
- Use a colored or decorated envelope for your entries.

"That way, your entries will end up in a greater variety of mailbags at contest headquarters and will give you a better chance if they take just a few from each bag as finalists," he said.

"I recommend that you find volunteer in Indiana to mail your entries because I've noticed in just about every contest, a person from that state wins."

"If a human being is choosing the finalists rather than a computer, an unusual envelope may get their attention," he added.

IT'S A MAD, MAD WORLD

Man goes to sleep in trash container and is compacted & trucked to garbage dump

A man crawled into a big trash container to get a warm night's sleep — and awoke to find himself compacted in a truckload of garbage.

"I screamed, but no one heard me," he says. "I thought I was a dead man. I didn't expect to come out of that thing alive."

Garbage kept entering the truck and the compactor kept squeezing it tighter on poor [illegible], Cleveland. Finally, he passed out.

A worker at the Badge, Tex., dump later opened Alvin carrying out of a load of garbage and called an ambulance. He was taken to a hospital and treated for a broken arm and various cuts and bruises.

Coin laundry sells booze to patrons

Two coin laundry owners are attracting washday blues by offering beer consumers hams, jukebox music and pinball machines.

Peter Stasio and Pete Zigouras run their wash-and-booze joint in Lawrence, Mass., finds "a" Suds and super business is booming.

"Laundry is just about the most boring thing to do in the world," says Stasio. "We're giving customers a chance to sit down and enjoy themselves while they're doing a disagreeable job."

Jailed suspect loves the lockup

A man held on charges of threatening to blow up a store says he'd rather stay in jail than go free.

Little boy's toy is a live grenade

A 4-year-old boy found a real rocket-fired grenade and played with it for nearly four months.

Elizabeth Cobrick says her boy, Johnathan, found the deadly device on the road near his Sandwich, Mass., home.

The 40 mm grenade was the size of a goose egg and had a copper top and a brass bottom. Experts say if it detonated it would have killed everybody within a 30-foot circle.

Elizabeth says Johnathan played with the grenade like a baseball and even took it to his kindergarten class.

The deadly toy was discovered when the boy's dad, William, found it in the basement and recognized the grenade immediately.

Cops say it apparently came from a nearby Army base.

He didn't notice being shot in head

Cops say a robbery victim, 46, was shot in the head — and he didn't know it.

The man, whose name was withheld, didn't hear the bang and felt nothing, the Ann Arbor, Mich., detectives said. He thought he had been hit with a club when the swagger took his wallet.

A day later the man went to the hospital with a headache and amazed doctors found the bullet lodged in his head behind his ear.

Mom forgets she left baby at home

The search for a woman's kidnapped baby ended abruptly when she remembered she left it at home with a baby-sitter.

The frightened mother had told Odessa, Tex., cops that when she returned to her car parked in front of a store her 2-year-old daughter was missing.

Cops fanned out over the area, searching the neighborhood and questioning witnesses. The search lasted two hours — until the embarrassed woman remembered she had left the little girl at home with a sitter.

Miracle saves priest during 8-day ordeal

By EWEN TOUNT CARMEN

His body flayed by a merciless wind, a priest wandered lost on a freezing mountain for eight terrifying days — until God stretched out His hand and saved him from certain death.

"I put myself in the Lord's hands, knowing well that He would take me if He wished," said Father Piers Grant-Ferris, a monk of the Benedictine order.

"I recalled how Jesus had survived 40 days in the wilderness, and I prayed I could do the same."

The priest's terrible ordeal began in January when he arrived Argentina's 22,834-foot Mount Aconcagua with a huge aluminium cross strapped to his back, accompanied by a guide. The Andean mountain is the highest in the entire western hemisphere.

As he had done on the highest peaks of any other continent, he planted the crucifix at the summit and said Mass. He prayed for world peace.

Next day in the daylight he could find the refuge hut down the mountainside where they planned to spend the night, but his guide stood with the equipment to prepare the evening meal.

But the 47-year-old priest never arrived.

The dangerous journey tired and slowed him more than he expected, and by nightfall he was lost.

Whispering a prayer, the shivering man blindly groped his way along the icy mountain in the wrong direction. Each step took him further from the usual downhill route and safety.

"For four days I didn't sleep because I thought I would freeze to death in the 30 below zero night cold," he told The NEWS. "I kept moving all the time, and when the sun rose, I didn't sleep because it soon got too hot."

The ruthless mountain did not even have mercy to quench the horrible thirst that plagued the British priest. It was summer in Argentina, and any overnight fall of snow was very quickly evaporated by the blazing sun.

With parched lips and palate fully four days without water, the suffering priest prayed silently for a miracle.

"My dear God, I can't stand this drouth longer," he implored. "If it is Your divine will, please send me some water."

And incredibly his prayer was answered — he opened his eyes and saw a puddle of clear water.

"I went a little closer I had with me to scoop up the water," he said. "It brought me back to life again. From then on, whenever I asked the Lord for water, I always seemed to find some."

"But as the days passed, I began to feel so lonely and lost. I felt a real unity with all the lost and lonely people of the world. I knew, maybe for the first time, how they really felt."

And by the fifth day, when he had stumbled into a vast and unpopulated valley, Father Grant-Ferris' body was so thin from starvation even sitting was painful.

With an empty stomach and a heart full of hope, he followed a river for three endless days. His eyes constantly scanned the wilderness, hungering for the sight of another human being.

Then, on the eighth day of his Odyssey as he sat sucking his painfully cut and swollen feet, he heard voices behind him.

He looked up and saw three Argentine soldiers.

"They jumped all their mules and ran up and hugged me," said Father Grant-Ferris. "We were laughing and crying at the same time. Everyone had heard about me and had been praying for my safety."

"The whole country was moved by his miraculous survival," said Mrs. Barry Bennin, a friend of the priest's who lives near the mountain.

"No one has ever survived more than three days on Mt. Aconcagua without any shelter, food or water. It is a killer. Some of the bodies of men lost there have never been found.

"There's no doubt that God stretched out His hand and saved him."

Later Father Grant-Ferris was taken to a hospital, where doctors were amazed to find he was remarkably fit, apart from a frostbitten toe.

"I recalled how Jesus had spent 40 days in the wilderness — I prayed I could do the same . . ."

Father Grant-Ferris holds the little crystal chalice he used to scoop up water from a life-giving pool on the mountain.

Bunnies in a bind

This bevy of beautiful Playboy Bunnies tried to break a British record when they all climbed into a small car. The previous record was 24 people — but in this car there was only room for 12 bunnies, even with the tailgate open. "That's because our bunnies tend to have bigger measurements than most girls," a London Playboy Club spokesman said. And looking at the picture, we can only agree.

Doctors' serenades put a song in patients' hearts

Four harmonizing doctors are helping their patients get well — to the strains of "My Wild Irish Rose" and "I Just Love My Coney Island Baby."

They formed a barbershop quartet to entertain patients. Their name is also well suited to patients, topic — and what makes doctors feel good.

"Many people feel doctors are aloof and busy in medicine is all about, and this is one more way we can do our job," said Dr. Kent Seidel. "It's a tremendous high to cheer the patients up."

Dr. Seidel and the remaining members call themselves the Spinal Chords, all four are orthopedic surgeons at Memorial Medical Center in Long Beach, Calif., a University of California hospital.

Dr. Richard Muller leads the quartet, which also includes Dr. Bud McDonell and Dr. Mark Rosenblum.

They started with a musical skit for the hospital staff more than a year ago and have kept singing because of popular demand. Nurses who find their patients depressed often call the doctors to sing over the phone.

"We practice in the elevator because it sounds so good in there," Dr. Seidel says.

Man sends $72 to pay for newspapers he stole when he was a poor youngster

A man who stole newspaper sports sections when he lived in a town some more than 10 years ago has sent $72 to make amends.

"I feel led by the Lord to pay this restitution money," Jim Urban wrote to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. "The enclosed money order is payments of the newspapers stolen between September 1966 and June 1968." Urban, 32, wrote from his home in Baltimore, Md.

Urban figured he swiped 700 copies of the sports section which he stood on St. Joseph's Home for Boys in St. Louis. Since he couldn't afford to buy newspapers, he sneaked them from the white Democrat box on his walked to school. Back then, sneaking a paper was easy. Unlocked boxes set up on the home streets have mushroomed to encourage a dime into a locked money box.

Urban's decision to make amends was prompted by a sermon he heard recently about making up for past wrongs.

"I'm a Christian, and I feel the Lord wanted me to do this to make things right," he said. "With the expenses being the way it is, I mean not the money. But the Lord made a way."

Air getting cleaner in most U.S. cities

The air is becoming cleaner in most American cities — even in the dirtiest.

The President's Council on Environmental Quality said in its annual report that in 53 cities on which it has five-year averages for pollutants at all, the air quality improved in 11 percent between 1974 and 1978.

Even Los Angeles and New York, nothing beat in pollution, have improved.

After the father lost a primary race in 1978 for the house seat he now holds, he suggested his daughter run for representative. Then the two switched roles last year when Debra urged her dad to run.

A man who said he was armed demanded $100,000 in "a business deal." Allison escorted him to Shirley Lemer's window, where an undetermined amount of cash was handed over.

Saying it wasn't enough, the clerk unknowingly gave the teller time to call police as she went for more money. Allison then grabbed the would-be robber in what he later called "a rodeo action."

Hollywood beauties are throwing themselves at handsome Tom Selleck but . . .

TV's 'Magnum' doesn't have time for romance

By RAFE KLINGER

Tom Selleck, right, with Katherine Cannon and John Hillerman in a scene from the new popular TV series, "Magnum P.I."

TV's hottest new star, the super-macho Tom Selleck of "Magnum P.I.," is frustrating some of Hollywood's most beautiful women by refusing to become romantically involved.

The handsome TV private eye is far too wrapped up in his work to let anything interfere — least of all an involved romance.

But this hasn't dampened the enthusiasm of the gorgeous starlets who have costarred with Selleck — a team of crusade and sex appeal. One by one they have come away baffled by his amazing ability to ignore their charms.

More often than not, Tom simply treats these irresistible females like a "big brother," one person told The NEWS.

"He's really nice and a lot of fun," she said, "but he's a pest and introverted."

Speculation is running high in Tinseltown that Tom still hopes to get back together with his estranged wife, a beautiful statuesque model named Jacqi Ray, whom he married nine years ago.

Indeed, the virile actor appears interested in just two things besides his work — his friendship with Jacki and his 4-year-old stepson, Kevin.

One close friend of Tom's discussed his split with Jacki.

"They just got to a point where they realized their interests lay in different areas," the friend said.

But they've remained friends and Tom literally adores Kevin.

"At the moment, because he's amicably separated from his wife and so busy with the series, he has no interest in romance," Tom's friend told The NEWS.

"He's the hottest thing on TV and the girls would willingly give him everything, but he's just not interested.

"He's got his mind on his work."

One pretty actress who appeared with Tom, 34-year-old Shawn Hoskins, noted a hint of sadness about the he-man star.

"He has everything — looks, fame — but something's missing," said Shawn, who played a theater designer on a recent "Magnum" episode.

"You can tell he's frustrated — not at peace with himself. He's looking for something."

Shawn said she was pleasantly shocked that such a handsome man was so friendly and not stuck on his looks. At the same time, she noted that he was not interested in romance, but set up a "brother-sister" relationship between them.

At one break in the shooting Shawn was startled when Tom suddenly turned to her and started out a very personal feeling.

"Shawn — I just want to find a woman who understands me," Tom confessed to her.

His open friendliness and almost protective behavior is apparently the opposite one has made him even more attractive to women than his handsome features.

One friend says that Tom had always felt that his good looks have held him back in his career. The many costing discoveries tell that the actor was the handsome one he grad is he true.

And other actors have been afraid to costar with Tom because of his breathtaking size and appearance.

Selleck's big break came in a Salem cigarette ad which ran in national magazines and on billboards. It was an arresting closeup of the face and his piercing hazel eyes which literally left the women who saw it weak in the knees.

Then came his smashing appearances with James Garner in the "Rockford Files." Tom played an almost perfect detective, Lance White, who had everything and could do no wrong.

Tom plays a private eye in "Magnum," but we very different from Lance.

"He was too perfect," says Tom about Lance. "Magnum has faults — that's what I like about him. He isn't always a winner, he's likable."

Mocha Tom Selleck is the wrapped up in work for love.

Cops and doctors unable to solve amnesia victim's baffling mystery

By DICK DONOVAN

Baffled police have hit a blank wall in their efforts to identify a "mystery woman" whose past lies in the fog-shrouded limbo of amnesia.

And doctors fear the woman has doomed herself to a hellish life of forgotten yesterdays and empty tomorrows behind the grim, gray walls of a South Florida mental hospital.

All they do know about the woman they call "Jane Doe" is that she was found teetering on the brink of death, sprawled in the dirt of a Fort Lauderdale park, her naked body ravaged by flies and other insects.

Weeks of gentle but probing psychiatric interviews and the use of "truth serums" and hypnosis have failed to shed any light on Jane Doe's hidden past. Even an FBI fingerprint check was fruitless.

The strange case is especially puzzling to Miami psychiatrist Jesse Kaye who has held daily sessions with the mystery woman since her arrival at the hospital.

"Her condition is rather unusual," Dr. Kaye explained to The NEWS. "Generally, in amnesia cases, it's one experience that can't be recalled, it isn't total.

"They may not know who they are, but they usually can remember what state they're from, the names of their brothers and sisters, where they went to school.

Who is the mysterious Jane Doe who seeks her identity?

"But in this case, the amnesia is total. She cannot remember anything of her past."

Dr. Kaye and his colleagues have come up with a "working diagnosis" — a starting point — in their effort to pierce Jane Doe's dark veil of amnesia.

"Her amnesia could be the result of conversion reaction — what lay people call hysteria," he explained. "It turns a person's psychological problems into real physical problems. This is done unconsciously and subconsciously.

"It's a very bizarre problem," he continued. "There is a lady who goes through each day saying, 'I don't know my name, I don't know my age. I don't know anything.' Her amnesia may be a form of subconscious escape."

Although Jane Doe has recovered from her ghastly brush with death from exposure, malnutrition and mistreatment, she wanders the halls of the mental hospital alone, unknown and unwanted.

"No one has stopped by to see me," Jane Doe said with a sigh of resignation. "I feel forgotten. I guess life works like that."

Hospital staffers describe her as a "loner" who doesn't mingle or socialize with other patients. She's 5-foot-4 and weighs 124 pounds. She has greenish-blue eyes, brown hair and distinctive moles on her neck. She is refined, intelligent and artistic.

And Dr. Cesar Hernandez, the psychiatrist who originally sent Jane Doe for her commitment to the mental hospital, views the mystery woman as a beautiful and fascinating detective story.

"Who brought her to the party?" he queries. "What did so traumatize her her that she doesn't even remember, or won't talk about it? Was she attacked, abused? Was she abandoned?"

Dr. Hernandez doesn't have the answers.

And Jane Doe can't — or won't — remember.

Wealthy woman saves thousands of mutts bound for gas chamber

She happily spends $386 every year helping poor strays

Rich, big-hearted Babette Lewyt is an incredible animal lover who has saved thousands of homeless dogs and puppies from an agonizing death in dog pound gas chambers.

Last year alone, the wealthy blonde mistress doled out $38,000 to rescue 3,000 doomed doggie orphans that now live in happy, loving homes.

"I don't care about the money," she told The NEWS with a shrug of disdain. "My husband gets the money and I get the dogs."

Each day Mrs. Lewyt slips behind the wheel of her roomy station wagon for her routine tour of dog pounds near her elegant Port Washington, N.Y., estate. Her dedicated mission: unwanted pets for the world's largest animal shelter, the North Shore Animal Rescue League.

At each pound, she stops at every cage, dipping into a bulging calfskin purse brimming with dog biscuits. She drops her little red nose through the chain-link fences to lump-, half-starved mutts and curs and, as though choosing designer dresses, she makes her lifesaving selections:

"I'll take this one . . . that one . . . that one . . ."

Then she signs a few papers, writes a check — $12.50 for each dog — and piles them into her station wagon for the ride to the Rescue League's upstate kennels.

"There now, you're all safe," she tells the dogs as she pulls away from the pound.

"We used to have people out in the country house here, but we don't want guests anymore," she explains. "We almost never go to our house in New York.

"This is all we want to do. It's our life now."

Her equally big hearted husband Alex does his share in the humanitarian rescue mission. He's the League's president and a sort of P.T. Barnum of animal placement.

His newspaper and TV fame and other luminaries like him help in payment for gasoline to people who adopt a dog.

"It's the same in any business, you have to get people all their you-know-what," he told The NEWS. "And once they arrive all the way out here — once they come face to face with these little furballs — there's no way they're going to leave here empty-handed unless we turn them down."

And the Rescue League is very busy about the fastest the dogs will go to. Last year the league placed just under 20,000 dogs.

But 40 percent of the people who asked to adopt dogs were rejected.

On Christmas morning, two shivering, scrawny dogs were left on the League's doorstep. But because the League didn't own the dogs, they had to go to the pound.

But five weeks later, there was animal loving Babette Lewyt, her bulging purse slung over her shoulder, dropping dog biscuits into their cage. "I'll take those two," she told the pound worker following at her heels.

Why do the Lewyts, who could spend their days in state and comfort, devote their lives to saving castaway pets?

"It's just because we love dogs," Mrs. Lewyt answers curtly.

"There is no other reason. We just love dogs!"

Dog lover Babette Lewyt cuddles a lucky pup she rescued from the gas chamber and will place in a happy home.

Gutsy cadet beats the odds to make a dream come true

By DICK DONOVAN

Cadet Dan Murrett was horribly mangled in a grinding auto accident, but the gutsy fighter refused to let it shatter his lifelong dream of graduating from West Point.

His determination to overcome staggering odds has put him back in the ranks of the U.S. Military Academy's historic "Long Gray Line."

Dan was in his senior year and a starting ace of the West Point hockey team when his dream of a military career almost ended on a dreary night in November 1978.

Dan and two teammates were driving here to the Academy after a bitter defeat by Princeton in neighboring New Jersey. Suddenly the car careened wildly out of control, slammed into a brick wall and overturned. Dan was hurled from the car.

There may have been worse cases brought to the Academy's Keller Army Hospital, but not many. Dan was dreadfully injured. He had a fractured skull, a crushed chest, two broken legs, gaping gashes and severe internal injuries. His teammates were less seriously hurt.

Doctors held out little hope that Dan would pull through and called his parents, John and Kate Murrett in Buffalo, N.Y., urging them to get to their son's bedside as quickly as possible.

"It was very traumatic — frightening," his father told The NEWS. "We were told we were racing the clock. But we never gave up hope. We knew that if we could just get to him in time, we'd be able to pass something along to him that would pull him through."

> 'I've always believed that if you have a goal and are willing to work, you'll be able to achieve it.'

When John and Kate reached their son, they found him unconscious, his forehead maimed and rearranged, his body encased in plaster and bandages.

After a week in the West Point hospital, Dan, still in a coma, was airlifted to Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, D.C. Weeks later he slowly emerged from his fog of oblivion.

"He recognized us," his father recalled. "But he must have thought he was a prisoner of war. He would only give his name, rank and serial number.

"The doctor would ask, 'Dan, how do you feel?' And Dan would answer, 'Cadet Daniel P. Murrett . . . Serial . . .' It was really very touching."

Dan was transferred to the Veterans Administration Hospital in Buffalo and, three months later, was finally allowed to go home. Then he began his courageous fight to return to the ranks of his fellow cadets.

For months the heroic 24-year-old exercised his way from wheelchair to walker to crutches to cane, slowly rebuilding his badly shattered body back to health. VA Hospital nurse Steve Mercurio guided him along the way.

"I couldn't keep my head above water and he took me swimming," Dan recalled. And Tom Nancy of the Berlin and Prince Center remembers: "I have never worked with anyone like Dan. He couldn't even get up off the floor by himself, but he wouldn't quit."

As Dan gained strength and confidence, he began his own grueling fitness program. Each day he would jog five miles, swim pool laps, lift weights, return for another swim and cap the day with more weight lifting.

"He just wouldn't quit. He doesn't know the meaning of the word," his father said. "I never thought he'd make it back to West Point. But his mother did. And so did Dan!"

But make it back he did. Cadet Daniel P. Murrett was readmitted to West Point with the class of 1981.

"I've always believed that if you have a goal and are willing to work, you'll be able to achieve it," Dan declared. "And I always knew I'd make it back to West Point."

News carrier calls it quits — at age 91

Leon Neale has retired from his job as a newspaper carrier — at the age of 91.

He would have retired earlier but he says he couldn't find a replacement who measured up to his high standards.

Finally, he found two neighbors he felt could handle the job and agreed to turn over his 300-customer route for The Hartford (Conn.) Courant in Ubera.

He spent several days training his replacements.

Leon's career as a newspaper carrier actually spanned about 75 years. Back when he was 16 or 17, he delivered the now-defunct Hartford Times for a year or so.

In 1918, Leon again found himself with time on his hands so he took on the Courant route.

He's looking forward to getting a few more winks of sleep in retirement. The Courant is a morning newspaper and for six years he was up at 3:30 every morning to make his rounds.

Why the new FILM ENCYCLOPEDIA is "the most comprehensive encyclopedia of world cinema in a single volume"

That's what the critics say. The prestigious Library Journal agrees: "easily fulfills the claim of the subtitle." Here's why...

over 1,000 entries — and no skimping • huge: over 1 million words • covers stars, directors, supporting players, writers, composers, designers, etc. • studio profiles • complete Academy Award winners in top 7 categories, year by year • illuminating • cross-referenced for easy access ("Costumes Room" sends you to Veronica Lake) • how movies developed • film groups and events • technical terms • detailed filmographies • massive 1,274 oversize pages weigh 4½ pounds

But it's more than a superb reference. Author-director Ephraim Katz makes it a pleasure to read — as addicting as peanuts, once you start browsing.

'Charlie's Angels' face the ax

. . . and even tantalizing Tanya can't help them

By BETTY MacNAB

The once high flying "Charlie's Angels" are in danger of being shot down by the studio big guns — and ABC insiders say it's only a matter of time before the show bites the dust.

Even tantalizing Tanya Roberts — the Angel on whose wings producers had pinned their last hopes — hasn't been enough to boost the show's sagging ratings.

"Everybody's talking now of how much the reruns will bring because nobody's betting on another season," said a source close to the beleaguered show.

A last ditch effort to save the Angels by moving them to an 8 p.m. Saturday slot failed miserably — the show plummeted to an all-time record low or third place in the Nielsen ratings.

Brent Garwood, the executive producer of Spelling-Goldberg, told The NEWS: "Any show that's that low in the ratings is in danger."

Angel Jaclyn Smith has already announced she's pulling out of the show after this season. The Angels could also find themselves without a protector for David Doyle, who plays "Bosley," may also quit.

Doyle wants his own TV show and he's written a situation comedy he's trying to sell to the networks.

"Charlie's Angels" is in its fifth year and when it came out it was a whole new concept idea — three women who were intelligent as well as beautiful," Garwood said.

"Women were just as big fans as men were and they liked the idea of watching beautiful women who weren't just sidekicks to some guy, but were thinking for themselves.

"The show was filled with action and it had all the elements for success — even the attractive clothes."

But then came action of another sort — squabbles behind the scenes.

Farrah Fawcett, her famous shaggy-maned head turned by success, left to try the movies. So did Kate Jackson. Shelley Hack left after one disastrous season.

There was more interest in the Angels' failing marriages than in the show. And as blame circles gathered over the set, ABC-TV stirred up more trouble by moving it from its popular Wednesday spot to Sunday night.

"We never wanted to go to Sunday nights," Garwood admitted. "It's important to have similar shows back to back because the TV audience is basically lazy and if they're satisfied with what's on — a line-up of comedies, for instance — they're not going to get up and change the channel.

"On Wednesday nights our 'Charlie's Angels' was a real winner and we were averaging a 34 percent share of the marquee. But against the CBS line-up of comedies on Sunday nights we know we were in trouble."

ABC spokesman Bob Wright told The NEWS: "There's no question that Charlie's Angels doesn't have the high ratings it did a few years ago."

Here Angel Tanya Roberts couldn't save the show from the ax. Her cronies seem to show their keen disappointment. From left, Cheryl Ladd, Jaclyn Smith and David Doyle.

Woman believed she knew killer who murdered two innocent men

She ends 28-year vow of silence and leads cops to her own brother

John Yeomans, arrested in connection with murders 28 years ago, looks grim-faced as he is led away by detectives.

By ROSALIND TELFORD

For 28 years, Phillomena Kessler shared the terrible burden of her secret with no one. Two men had been brutally murdered — and she believed she knew who pulled the trigger.

In a sacred vow of silence to her desperately pleading mother, Mrs. Kessler kept the awful truth from the world — that she thought her own brother was the murderer.

But aging and unable to live for another day, the grief-stricken woman last summer told police all she knew, and last month her own brother, John Yeomans, was charged with the cold-blooded crime.

The nearly forgotten murders began on Oct. 25, 1950 when two men left their hometown, N.Y., known for a day of partridge hunting in the woods.

They were never seen alive again.

The next morning the bloodsplattered bodies of fugitive war hero Robert Nugent, 41, clerk of the small town of Geneva, and his friend Charles Simpson, 36, a bank trust officer, were discovered sprawled in the woods near their jeep.

Each had been shot in the head and body. The carcass of a buck lay between them.

Shaksburg buzzed with the tragic news while the police looked frantically for those who would point them to the killer.

Dozens of people, including Yeomans, were interviewed. But the police were frustrated and stumped.

After months of investigation, detectives could only conclude that the murderer was a deer poacher who had panicked when he ran into Nugent, who was in charge of issuing hunting licenses.

The clues at the shocked tragedy eventually shut down — the small town of Geneva and for Mrs. Kessler the torment had only just begun. Each passing day she was torn between loyalty to her mother and the knowledge that two innocent men had been murdered while the man she believed was their killer walked free.

But several years ago Mrs. Kessler's mother died. And in July 1968 the suspect's sister — no longer bound by her vow — came forward and unburdened her conscience to the police.

"The further we dug, the better it looked," investigator Mike Arnold of the New York State Police told The NEWS.

"We kept going, and the end result was the arrest of John Yeomans who has lived in the area all these years."

Yeomans, 54, who insists he's innocent, was arrested in February.

He is outraged over his arrest, said his attorney, Richard Cassidy.

"He swears he didn't do it and I'm convinced he's telling the truth."

Peron movie spells big trouble for Faye Dunaway

By KITTY MacNAB

Now that he owns Palm Springs is once more a hot property in Tinseltown. She tells us she's still stuck in the middle of an international mess that could make her a big money-making producer.

The sultry beauty is part of the hot-to-get Paul Goldhoff of the new film, Montana Diamond, and Faye cannot leave on location because she's still working on a play and is in the set.

But she's not sure she can do the film and keep appointments with Faye's boyfriend of Scandinavian descent, Lars Peter, and is scrambling about planning an exit.

The problem is that Faye is in trouble with the Argentine government because she refused to play Eva Peron in the movie. Faye's boyfriend is Swedish.

"Locations In The Sea At Exclusive Resorts, My Own Private Plane, A Swimming Pool, A Yacht, Servants—I Never Have To Lift A Finger Anymore!"

That's the kind of life Christine L. leads, but a month ago no good. She was up to a thick consumer holding with an electric bill she barely supplied her with enough money for clothes. One day, while rummaging through the pockets of an old dress she discovered a crumpled piece of paper with the words from Dalal Lamang Island written on it. Christine felt she never knew she could . . .

She decided to follow the hand-written instructions and someone just handed her a check for more than $100 dollars at an impressive dollar sign. The lucky spell had barely worked was changed, bringing her $1,000,000! A few months later she sold her share of a Malaysian she had invested in for just under $2,000,000! Today the money just keeps rolling in!

And what you can say these amazing spells and rituals you will see the same kind of results coming down on you in a wonderful deluge of good fortune—riches, happiness, vibrant health, overall knowledge and supreme power do in any circumstance, in a matter of minutes or a second!

Just Take A Look At How These Contented Ritualists Mystery Have Used This Potent Magic To Improve Their Lives:

- Mary F. had to suffer from glaucoma, and was afflicted by a stiffness, shoulder aspect, including migraines and unending abdominal. After dropping behind in her work, she knew she desperately had to get her act together and find a way to change. A few days after she discovered the Supreme Good Fortune Ritual and by gosh, really did have to all very happy with good health and vitality. Says Mary, "I've never had it so well. My work and relations are unbelievable!"
- Lorraine D. + could never seem where she had made it right to be on time! Both their and work always late, and she seemed to grow up enough to make it up to their bosses. Tired and hungry, she managed to have found the Getting-to-work at the I-Can-Wear-Those-Bangs Ritual a few months ago and since then, she's been on time, no problems! Lorraine overnight, learned about the Get-Ahead-At-Work Ritual. "I've never had it so well. My work and relations are unbelievable!"
- Thomas V. has good days, before and was constantly walking on long odours as well as without love. His associates, parents, to get ahead. Before he stumbled into the Get-Ahead-At-Work Ritual, he was frustrated. He decided to use the Get-What's-Coming-To-Me Ritual. Thomas was in the right mood when he did the ritual and after that, the subsequent had taken him. He even had the nerve to ask for a raise and was shocked to be told! The salesmen were quickly promoted and Thomas received a $100 raise. "I owe it all to the Get-What's-Coming-To-Me Ritual. I've never had it so well. My work and relations are unbelievable!"

Many M.S. are going to make a real C SMALL BIG NEW Wish-Maker Ritual. Of real importance the Irresistible Charm Ritual is all over—and I can understand. You are practically magic when you desire and nothing can stand in your way!

It's your turn to discover the awesome magical powers that ancient practitioners brought to it, make a beautiful, vivacious girl fall madly in love with you, or stop annoying bill-collectors. Astrology becomes only a surface action operation, making both the life of others and your personal success happen through hidden darkness and evening for love magic of your choice!

"Such Knowledge Must Be Spread Around! Check It For Yourself And See Its Powerful Results!"

That's what Victor G. advises, and who'll probably be saying the same thing to a short while. A short time ago one of the special Double-Winning rituals or procedures over a dinner date was causing excruciating pain and nervousness reluctance. Taken by Bob's the Check Skill and mind-you—he's one person who knows the power of magic!

And so is Karen P. who came down a bit of disconcerting misery up ago of intimate misery. Man brought back to life tells of incredible trip to gates of heaven

By DICK DONOVAN

"Oh, dear Jesus! Please help me! I can't stand the pain anymore."

With that prayer for divine mercy Harold Kaufman literally died. And began an incredible seven-minute journey to the gates of heaven.

And while a team of surgeons frantically struggled to restore Kaufman's heartbeat, a haunting glimpse of the afterlife.

The retired clerk, 57, remembered nothing of his nightmare ordeal. But his doctors were overjoyed to report the first successful use of "cardiac massage" to bring a patient back to life.

Dozing docker is shipped out in sealed box

A dock worker who opened a shipping container during his lunch break was accidentally hauled off on a 30-day voyage.

Elephant-sized waste of your tax $$ goes to peanut-brained zoo program

When does the federal bureaucracy turn into a real zoo? When it uses your hard-earned tax dollars to send zoo keepers gallivanting across the country on an elephant hunt, part.

In an amazing demonstration of bubble-brained thinking, bureaucrats at the Department of Education's Institute of Museum Services (IMS) have squandered $26,000 for a federal grant — part of which sent two animal keepers on California to a three-day elephant conference in Yuba City.

While that story and the the biggest example of government spending a disproportionate amount that government is now spending for scientific and other anything, scientist Seth Weaver, Pressure at the San Diego Appropriations Committee.

It is also wrong for the federal government to provide for the exercises activities that is in question for it to be funded by participants. Pressure said.

According to Pressure, the grant to the Santa Barbara Zoo is one of ten federal grants totalling $1.5 million last year given by the IMS to zoos and museums throughout the country to spend as their directors wish.

The local officials were not required to say how the money would spend the money," Pressure charged.

Officials at IMS claim that the money is important because it means the difference between the success and failure of some museums. But Pressure disagrees.

As with so many of these pet the money on the stump and run programs, the differences between the ideal set down by the director or museum and the actual spending was as great as the difference between the shape and location of an elephant's trunk and tail," Pressure said.

The money didn't go to feed the animals or to help keep the doors to the Santa Barbara Zoo open.

The Santa Barbara Zoo spent $1,918 on sending zoo keepers to conventions.

In addition to sending two animal keepers to the elephant workshop, the zoo keeper also sent an federal taxpayers' expense to the American Association of Zoo keepers convention in Montgomery, Ala.

"Frankly, I'm people who should be keeping a eye on the city and county officials — used as officials in their own jurisdictions as well as the federal government to pick up part of the cost for running their own."

It is clear that importance to a community, that community should be willing to pay for it out of its own funds.

There is nothing wrong in maintaining and improving our national museums and zoos. But should the federal taxpayers provide funds for bears and tigers and bears as well as elephant watchkeepers?"

Pressure awarded IMS his Golden Fleece Award given monthly to the biggest, most ridiculous or most wasteful example of wasteful government spending.

Honest [redacted] in $ from heaven

Motorists stopped up Utica, hordes of dollars as bills rained into a street — and two honest guys took the riches they snatched to police.

"It was no motion," said Alain Sirtalis, who turned in $3,700. "I never saw anything like it in my whole life."

Thousands of dollars fluttered around a New York City street before dawn. And early birds scrambled through traffic bagging the loot.

"It was very exciting," said Ben Yehuda, a 43-year-old cab driver who turned in $1,200 or $20 and stop bills. The driver saw the bills and started from his cab shouting, "Money! Money!"

Where the money came from is a mystery, and no one has filed claim for it. Yehuda and Sirtalis, a 38-year-old hospital cook, are the only ones who turned in their incredible finds.

Officials believe that about $10,000 is as matched by motorists. Sirtalis' treasure included several $20 as well as the $100 and $50 denominations.

AT LAST! THE SIMPLE, SAFE AND SURE WAY TO RICHES!

You Walk Past A Million Dollar Opportunity Every Single Day Of Your Life! Now, Your Success Can Be Guaranteed!

My name is Marc Schlechter. I am going to speak to you bluntly. Stop selling yourself short! Your personal financial success can now be guaranteed. It does not matter who you are, how much or how little education you have, whether you have a job lost one or are about to be layed off! There is a fortune waiting for you out there, now! For heaven's sake, don't you realize that your time to be a rich person like finally Isn't it painful to realize that a million dollar opportunity passes you every single day of your life! Few people ever talk about it! Not only are these opportunities around you now, but you, without knowing it, have contributed to produce [illegible] opportunities to make someone else a rich person! Someone living in a mansion, driving fancy cars, traveling the world, skiing in Switzerland, sunbathing in the South [illegible] socializing with [illegible] bank president, and laughing his way thru life! Why not become [illegible] person!

PUT TWO AND TWO TOGETHER

It is all that simple. No magic formula, no extraordinary wisdom. [illegible] the secrets of my formula and find the big bucks. Your success is guaranteed, as the big bucks are right here, right under your nose, waiting to be grabbed!

AGAINST ALL ODDS

Fresh out of school I started a company. God, did I have hopes. But, I failed. Discouraged, I took up employment with a large corporation. I was paid for what I delivered. As I delivered a lot, I was paid a high salary and moved up the corporate ladder. Was I on my way to a financial security? No way! The only thing I achieved was making a lot of money for someone else, the corporation! All this time I was completely dispensable. I lived off the life-line of a pay-check, in false self-convinced security. I worked 12 and more hours a day, spending my energy for someone else! Life wasn't worth much, I hardly saw my family, and inflation ate away on the little savings I had. One day, after 10 years with a corporation, I just had it and quit my job. I had, with a little help, found my simple success formula, realizing that all these years of work, testing and experiencing were to bear their fruits in such simple and sure ways, that it was hard to accept at first.

SUCCESS

If one is to judge success by material achievements, then I made it in style, and fast. When I quit, I lived in a 2-bedroom apartment. One year later, I owned a $325,000 home, 4 companies of my own, a stable of luxury cars, investments and foremost, the kind of life worth living, total financial independence and the time to enjoy it with my family.

RELY ON YOURSELF

No, you do not have to buy and stock products, or go into mail order, or find the right real estate opportunity, or gamble with the hope of winning. It is all a simple matter of learning the secrets of my formula and putting it into action.

FOUR STEPS

That is all it takes. Four simple steps in the right direction. I call it the 'millionaire syndrome'. This is now available to you! I wrote a 200-page book which takes you from where you are now to the financial heights you deserve to achieve to become the Master of your own Destiny. You will feel and see success awards you! Frankly, this book is the best as it is based 100% on my own personal experience and achievement! And here are a few testimonials:

-I feel I owe you $10,000 for your brilliant advice.
B.M. student
Boston

-The finest, the simplest, thank you a million.
F.G. housewife,

-at first I doubted but, you were absolutely right. Your formula works, and works...

GET OUT FROM UNDER

To become involved in the most honest and reputable way to riches, you will not have to quit your job now. You can do both and succeed. Or, you can adopt the formula in it's fullest. It's your choice. That's the beauty of it. One thing is for sure, my book will benefit you for as long as you live. How many jobs can guarantee that?

Marc Schlechter

None! From now on, control your own life! Your boss can throw you out for no other reason than: someone else can do the job better or simply because he spots your first grey hair! My 200-page book reveals the formula to riches, straightforward, with no second guessings. It will put you quickly into your new world of extraordinary financial opportunities and rewards.

I revealed my formula in person to many people even in such far-away places as London, Rome, Stockholm, Brussels, Paris, Athens, Singapore. I was paid a lot of money to do it. Now, my formula is available to benefit you. When you read my book, you pick my brains, and frankly speaking, there is no way you can lose. Don't live with regrets tomorrow by not ordering today!

'Dallas' star who plays J.R.'s gal owes success to a lucky car wreck

Pretty Meg Gallagher of "Dallas" says a lucky traffic accident helped launch her skyrocketing career.

By EARL ELDRIDGE

Meg Gallagher, who plays J.R.'s sexy secretary and mistress on "Dallas," landed her first acting job and found her true love by accident — in a traffic accident.

Four years ago the pretty 26-year-old actress whose steady beau is "Dallas" superstar Jack Wrangler had just arrived in Hollywood and was looking for a job.

"I was driving down the street and this car suddenly backed out of a driveway," Meg recalls. "I had to swerve to miss him and scratched another car.

"I started yelling at the guy and he said, 'My, you're pretty when you're mad. Have you ever thought about acting?'

"I said, 'You're crazy.'"

The guy turned out to be a producer for Jack Lemmon. Unfortunately, Meg was given a role the next week and Jack was not on the set. But they remained good friends and Jack was responsible for getting her her first big break, says Meg.

Six months later she took her younger sister to see Jack star in "Irma la Douce." Two days later Jack's secretary called Meg and asked her to drop by the set. She was hired on the spot.

Larry Hagman, above, is Meg Gallagher's TV boyfriend. In real life she's swoon on "Dallas" Jack Wrangler, right.

Meg is especially excited with her new role now that Lucille has become one of the evil villains a villainess because it means bigger roles.

Ironically, Meg and Lucille have nothing in common.

"Lucille is married and more traditional than me," says Meg.

"I'm single and athletic, the All American type girl.

"Also, Lucille feels attracted to Bobby."

"I believe that what you put out comes back.

"But Lucille is really sweet. Her husband is away and she has emotionally needs that need to be filled."

While she's happy with her juicy "Dallas" role, Meg says her dream is to land a part in a comedy series.

"But the great thing now is that I'm getting to work with some of the biggest names in show business like Larry Hagman," she said.

"It's really thrilling."

Boy's balloon travels almost 2,000 miles in less than two days

Two little boys were brought together by a childish interest in mail experiment that would make the professionals look at the post office grown with envy.

It all started when Tommy Chang, 8, who lives near Los Angeles, Calif., attached a note to a helium-filled balloon and sent it skyward.

Less than two days later, Bradley Jones, 8, of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan — that's 1,800 miles away — found the note and balloon as he checked his animal traps. The weather bureau says the balloon made the jet stream in Canada.

Three's Company's dizzy Chrissy replaced by an even dumber blonde

By REX WINSTON

Ol' Rex has mixed emotions, nowadays. I'm trying to figure out if the good news is better than the bad news.

The good news, of course, is Suzanne Somers is finally getting her comeuppance — ha-ha, it's about time! And I'm excited to see this bumbling blonde come tumbling down from her heights on "Three's Company."

The bad news is that Suzanne's being replaced by an even dumber blonde. She's Jenilee Harrison and she wears so much makeup, poor Suzanne looks like Albert Einstein.

But let's glory in a setback for the brushes of charisma, poor Suzanne.

Suzanne Somers chooses the "Three's Company" soap.

As you may have heard, sinful Suzanne broke a solemn pact she made years ago with her "Three's Company" co-stars, John Ritter and Joyce DeWitt. The pact was that nobody would rock the boat of success by making greedy salary demands. Everybody stayed put and collected big bucks and "Three's Company" went along just peachy.

But Suzanne jumped ship and demanded an increase her salary, according to one report she got an almost-yes. I'm told, that ABC said not to take her usual chutzpa as being a ABC didn't budge (finally a network stinks in its guest and Suzanne pulled back on her guard.

But ABC wasn't so eager to accept her apology. And after and [illegible] wasn't up eager to trust her again. In fact, John and Joyce went packing to the with Suzanne. They don't even talk to her.

Instead of having Suzanne by bygones, ABC has handpicked Suzanne from the "Three's Company" studio. All ABC will let Suzanne do is a 45-second phone call at the end of each show.

A few weeks ago, a twenty-year Suzanne over on the Tomorrow show with Dinah Shore and tried to get back into ABC's good graces. ABC is laughing at that idea.

That's enough good news. Now for the bad news. And that's Jenilee Harrison.

ABC execs stands for Already Bad and Crudity could have grabbed a talented actress for the show role but they stayed a rotten apple. Jenilee's only acting experience is being a former Los Angeles Rams cheerleader. The Rams are a bunch of hunks and a Jenilee at any autograph for her fans cheerleaders. "Three's Company" is going out of business with actresses like her.

Back-to-back commercials wreck viewing and should be banned

I'm thoroughly aware that advertising is necessary on commercial television stations — but does the advertising have to be so obnoxious?

I have no objection to a few commercials in a program, perhaps one at the opening and close of a program and others every 15 minutes or so. But I can't handle five minutes of back-to-back stupid commercials interrupting a program every few minutes.

The first network to cut down on the number of commercials will be the most popular network in America.

I agree with every word that Rex Winston writes.

I cannot stand to watch any of the programs on TV. All you see are naked girls, blood and, whether — or a bunch of cursing, stupid wrestlers.

I'd rather get a good book and go to bed and read.

'Brady Bunch' star quit TV and found peace with God

By [illegible]

Ann B. Davis, the zany actress who played Alice the lovable housekeeper on "The Brady Bunch," dropped out of show business for God.

Ann's warmth made "The Brady Bunch" and earlier "The Bob Cummings Show" TV smash hits.

But since 1974 she has been living quietly in a Christian community headed by the Episcopal Bishop William C. Frey in Denver, Colo.

She has made a few commercials, but used most of her time telling others of her miraculous discovery that God loves us all.

"I never really felt strong," Ann told The NEWS. "I dropped out for one year to learn more about the Bible."

The newly born-again returned to TV for "The Brady Girls Get Married" special. NBC chief Fred Silverman liked it so much he signed Ann for a "Brady Brides" series.

And even with a "fortified" role, Ann was leery. But this time it was different.

"I've got different priorities now," she explained. "I know what's most important."

Five years ago, she ruthlessly quit her agents after she was looking elsewhere and not calling her for a year.

Like most prima donnas, Ann had always felt driven to perform because she "needed to be loved."

Acting was the most important thing in her life. But despite a successful career including two hit series, she felt something was missing.

"It was funny," she said. "You've got all the things you thought you wanted — money, fame, travel, awards — and you still have to wonder why you're not happy."

People use their work and careers as false idols and they look for fulfillment in them."

Then Ann made a startling discovery while attending a Bible study class at her North Hollywood church.

"I began to realize that the God who created the universe loved me. When you discover that God loves you personally — really loves you — it opens up whole new worlds for you.

"It changes your perspective. It becomes less dependent on the outside for love."

Ann calls her discovery a "miracle," but she adds that she had no burning encounters with visions or voices.

"A big part of the miracle was that when I wept it wasn't over all that performing — and I didn't miss it," she said.

There'll be gone nights between acting jobs and it had almost driven her crazy.

"Now I don't have to perform — I'm not driven. It's a very freeing feeling.

MY AMERICA
By ED ANGER

I'm glad we're talking tough about English

I want to stand up and cheer President Reagan for having the guts to take a stand against one of the silliest things the wimpy liberals have pushed for — bilingual education in our schools.

This stupid program — in which foreign kids are kept speaking their own language instead of English — was one of the biggest dangers America has ever faced.

Not only did bilingual classes threaten to break the back of our institutions, but at the rate it was going, it would have turned America into a Tower of Babel.

Ex-Prez Jimmy Carter, the best friend Iran ever had, was all set to push bilingual programs on the national airwaves.

Mr. Peanut wanted school districts to provide special foreign-talking teachers for every 20 students that spoke another language.

These extra teachers and classrooms added up to millions of bucks.

Even worse, by rewarding students to keep talking foreign tongues, they'd never learn how to speak and read English — why should they?

America's big cities already resemble a big zoo. Unless all the foreigners who have moved in and refused to learn English

You can't even watch kids' TV channels on your TV sets now, because they're in some other language.

The dumb bilingual programs were pushed on us by schools in the bend-over-backwards liberals who think hard work is a crime and that the real criminals should serve their time in a country club instead of a prison. If their plan had succeeded, we would need a passport to go shopping downtown.

We are against foreigners coming to America. Except for the Indians, every one here was a foreigner at one time.

But if you want to live in America, forget all about your old country and learn the ropes.

I like how President Ronald Reagan laughs back and gets even with the whiners and the whimperers the liberals are going to make over him.

And any foreigners who don't like it can go back to where their language is the native tongue.

If they want to stay here, let them learn to talk the language, and all respect for the nation if nothing else.

Psychic helps worried execs make their big decisions

Dee Beckett's clients are big businessmen and worried housewives who come from all over the world just to consult her — she has the amazing power to read their futures.

The incredible psychic sees her clients' futures as rainbows of color around their heads. Each color has a different meaning.

"The colors are just like those you see in this world," she says. "They glow. Even the black is brilliant."

The astounding British psychic is not the only one to be totally blind but she's amazing ability to see the future. Her daughter Lynne and her grandson Ashley have developed the same gift.

Many of her clients are businessmen who take important decisions based on their powers from trusted associates. Some of them travel from all over parts of Europe and even from America to have a little bungalow located outside of Ludlow just to consult her before a big business deal.

She finds it difficult to explain just how she "sees" a client's future. "I just have to relax and hold somebody's hand. Their eyes go out of focus and then the pictures form," said the psychic pointing to an area just above her left shoulder.

People from all walks of life track her down to learn what's in store for them.

"One young man came to see me and the first thing I saw in his aura was a St. Christopher medal. So I told him he was safely insured.

"'That's tied for that,' he said. 'It's a jet pilot.' Just imagine how much better he felt about flying after hearing that."

Dee's uncanny ability is apparently not a comfort to her clients. An animal lover, she recalled an incident involving Tabby, a battered old stray cat that had died a few weeks after they had adopted him.

"One day I suddenly looked up and saw this beautiful black cat with shining eyes," said Dee. "I said, 'surely you don't go Tabby' and suddenly it changed before my eyes. There was our old cat looking at me. I'm sure he came back to reassure me that he'd found a better life."

Dee is a faithful and believer. It's impossible to escape destiny, Dee, she is convinced, is to use her remarkable gift to help others who are beset with worry about the future.

Ex-teacher is a world's champion runner—at 73

Spunky Marilla Salisbury may be retired but she is certainly not spending her leisure hours in a rocking chair. The 73-year-old ex-teacher is wearing medals — as a world champion runner.

The busy physical fitness buff from San Diego, Calif., holds seven world records for runners 72-74 years old. She keeps in shape by running anywhere from four to 12 miles a day and she's flown as far as New Zealand to compete.

"I didn't start running until I was 70," she said. "I had just gotten remarried and my husband is 78, but he's real frisky and he said if I got fat he'd leave me.

"I decided to go down to the local gym and start working out and that's started running around the track."

That work prompted Marilla and Marilla joined up the nickname "Bubbles" but the old fashioned little lad she wants to keep all the fun.

She runs at dawn or after dark and when the weather's bad she runs on a treadmill.

She also takes exercise classes which include routines and lifts weights at a gym.

She doesn't have time for boyfriends but she's affectionately known by her fans, who wrote her a poem.

Marilla listens to moans and groans of old people who let age get the best of them.

"I think they just want sympathy," she told The NEWS. "They sit all day and all they talk about is their ailments and their problems with their husbands and children.

"If they would just get off their rusty duffs and turn off the couch tube they'd be surprised how fast their tribulations and problems would pass go away."

Swimming has also helped her feel 20 years younger.

"My doctor tells me I'll live to be 100 — if I don't run in front of a freight train."

She has a case filled with medals and holds the world's record for her age group in the 100-, 200-, and 400-, 1,500-, 3,000- and 10,000-meter runs in races that were sponsored by the American Athletic Union.

She has also run a 14 minute mile.

And she doesn't have to worry about getting fat — she's a trim 5-foot-6 and 118 pounds.

"It's funny," said Marilla, "when I was a little kid nobody wanted me to play on their team. Guess I was slow. But I'm fast now, anyway."

Pickpocket pros follow tourists through Europe

A band of the world's most talented thieves — some of them graduates of an elite South American pickpocket university — are traveling the jet-setters' European holiday circuit and they're getting rich in the process.

So says Robert Arno of Miami, Fla., a recognized expert on pickpocketing who serves as a consultant to law enforcement agencies all over the world.

He says that about 100 of [illegible] nimble-fingered professionals scour all of London in May and follow the good weather through Scandinavia and [illegible] Europe returning to London in September.

All along the way, he says, they fleet their pockets with the kind they lift as they ply their fine art on the rich tourists.

Many of them pick up [illegible] a quarter of a million dollars in a single season.

Some of them outfit themselves [illegible] they travel in "The School of the 10 Bells," the University of the pickpocket world, located in Bogota, Colombia.

He kills 44 airplane passengers to collect his mother's insurance

By RYAN O'BRIEN

The huge airplane seemed to hesitate in its climb above Denver airport, then it shuddered like a wounded beast and exploded into a terrifying orange and red fireball.

Watching from the coffee shop that evening of Nov. 1, 1955, was 23-year-old Jack Graham, his wife and baby son.

Just a few minutes earlier Graham had kissed his mother goodbye and wish her aboard the doomed flight — he knew it was a one way journey to oblivion.

Forty-three others died with Graham's mother that night — the crew members and 36 fellow passengers — but she had been the real target.

Looking properly haggard with shock, Graham led his family through the stunned crowd at the terminal. There was simply no hope anyone had survived, he told his wife.

He stopped only once on the way to their car, to throw up in the men's rest room and take another look at the flight insurance policies he had persuaded his mother to sign.

One was for $37,000 and named himself as beneficiary. But in his haste and nervousness he had valued three other policies totaling $140,000. He had been the beneficiary in all three.

Within a few hours investigators knew they were dealing with a nightmare come true — the first sabotaged airliner in criminal and aviation history.

When the wreckage was reassembled the FBI found a gaping hole in the right side of the tail section.

Obviously the explosion had been from within, and an FBI headquarters squads of executives went to work examining other evidence from the crash site.

On many of the baggage was a telltale gray deposit found to be the residue of a dynamite blast.

No longer in doubt, FBI men searched into the backgrounds of the 44 victims. Nineteen of them had taken out flight policies totaling $63,000. But the biggest beneficiary was young Jack Graham.

Interviewed by FBI agent Ray Moore, the husky young man parried all questions with a look of outraged innocence.

Why, you, they'd driven his mother to the airport, and he'd slipped something into her luggage "as a surprise for her when she reached Alaska."

During a search of the Graham home agents found a roll of copper wire with yellow insulation — the kind of wire used in detonating primer caps.

And they found that Graham had visited bird dogs to gun store where he showed great interest in the use of electronic gadgets.

Only 10 days after the airline disaster, Montgomery Graham II had become richer and quickly lost the evidence before him.

Graham turned pale but showed no sign of surrender. "All right," he said. "Where do you want me to start?"

In his signed confession, he told of stealing a time bomb consisting of the dynamite, the primer caps, the timer and a six-volt battery.

He had been forced to take some things from his mother's suitcase in order to make room for the bomb's surprise.

Moore stayed at him with revulsion. "And you never even thought about the other people?" he asked.

"Man, it could have been a thousand," Jack Graham said, "and I wouldn't really have cared. I just sort of figured their time had come."

As the incredible story circled the globe there were those who thought it had permanently blighted insurance aviation.

In the short run it did. Big airlines tried to have him declared insane.

But on May 3, 1956 a jury of ten men and two women found him guilty of first-degree murder. And on January 11, 1957, he was married to the lethal gas chamber at the Colorado penitentiary at Canon City.

The chamber door closed at 7:58 p.m., and a minute later the hangman was forced to drop the cyanide eggs into the container of sulphuric acid. Graham was dead by 8:06 p.m.

He died less painfully than the doomed victims on Flight 629 — but from the man whom philosophy, his only last words.

THE ANSWER MAN

Loni Anderson

Bleaching cost sexy Loni Anderson a lot of hair

Q. My wife says I'm nuts, but I heard somewhere that sexy Loni Anderson of "WKRP in Cincinnati" is losing all of her hair and will soon be bald. I admit that it sounds pretty farfetched. What are the facts?

Bob Thurlowe,
Chicago, Ill.

A. The facts are that Loni, a natural brunette, has lost a lot of hair because of switch to platinum blonde. Loni says the continual chemicals have thinned her hair by about 30 percent. But it's all back in the right place, so to see — except Loni and her hairdresser — that really isn't the difference. She says it has taken a couple of years becoming platinum, and she'd just as soon go back to keeping it healthy.

Goose's first series was 'Riley'

Q. I can still remember the old "Line at Riley" radio show — but I was a little boy at the time. I remember seeing a TV show on the air — I remember seeing a TV show in the fifties, but I can't recall who played Charley A. Riley. And what is the story underlying the name?

Mrs. Dorothy Williamson,
Atlanta, Ga.

A. Actor William Bendix was Riley on the radio, but when it was turned into a TV series in 1953 the starring role went to young Jackie Gleason in his first TV series. "The Greatest" played Riley for a year then Bendix stepped in and played the lead until the series ended in 1958. The friendly undertaker was Digger O'Dell, played on both radio and TV by John Brown, who always ended his conversations with Riley: "Guess I'd better go shoveling dirt."

Jackie Gleason

'Tribute' star started young

Q. The young man who played Jack Lemmon's son in the movie "Tribute" is a very talented and believable actor. Who is he — and has he made any other films?

Mary Rose,
Philadelphia, Pa.

A. He's Bobby Boriskin, a 16-year-old who has been a professional actor since playing a little prince in "The King and I." In films, he had big roles in "Jeremy," "Ode to Billie Joe," "Ice Castles," "Little Ol' One," "Die Laughing" and "Walk Proud." Bobby's next film appearance due is a couple of months, is in "The Chosen."

Doris Leachman says she's a good witch

Q. My husband says he read somewhere that actress Doris Leachman, who appeared in the TV movie "Advice to the Lovelorn" practices witchcraft. Is it true — or just some Hollywood press agent's idea of getting publicity?

Marsha Dechow,
Detroit, Mich.

A. Without revealing a press agent, Doris says she is a second-generation witch — but, of course, a good witch. She says back in Des Moines, Iowa, her mom was a good witch and she has the same talents. Doris says that she specializes in curing people's emotional, physical and psychological problems using her powers.

'I've seen something special & unreal'

UFO chases cop and performs amazing stunts

Miguel Cueva (2nd left) and three friends with passengers of the UFO he caught on film and later demanded Press and TV's Cameras

In one of the strangest UFO encounters ever a huge, bright red disk followed a police chief's car for 90 minutes — and performed amazing aerial stunts whenever he flashed his headlights.

"I never believed in UFOs before, but I realize I've seen something special and unreal," says Miguel Cueva, 36, police chief in Nico Uruguay.

It was in the early morning hours that Cueva, his wife Carmen and another couple Armando and Maria Prez saw the UFO as their car bumped along a gravel highway near the town of Tacuarembo. They were on their way home from a visit when the UFO gleaming with bright yellow and orange lights loomed up in front of them.

Cueva stopped the car and in an impulse tried to overtake the craft by flashing his headlights at and off.

"All of a sudden the UFO hesitated then zigzagged up and back as if answering our signals," he recalled.

"As soon as he started out again it was there following us. I stopped the car again and flashed my lights — and again the UFO reacted in much the same manner as the first time. The thing was about 200 feet above the ground with its always about half a mile away. This went on for at least 30 minutes.

"That's when the strangest thing of all occurred.

We were all glued to the window watching as the red disk suddenly shot low and the earth shook. I was going to crash. But at the last moment it hovered a few inches above the ground.

It was a huge craft. It had a round dome like shape with a large flat plate underneath and there was a slight ring of lights around the dome. The top was reddish but the bottom was a brilliant glowing white.

Cueva believed he had. they turned the car around and headed back to Tacuarembo with the blazing light of the UFO hovering in their rear as they sped along at speeds of over 100 mph. When they came to a stop, parked in front of the police station, the craft hovered over the car for a few minutes and then shot straight up and disappeared.

They never touched but seemed to travel together. They moved up and down and circled about in front. They passed over the top of the vehicle and if they up like a flash. Then they faded, getting smaller and smaller until they were finally gone.

It was three days before [illegible] each other without speaking. We still couldn't believe what we had seen.

Researcher says magnetic changes make people burn

Mysterious changes in the Earth's magnetic field may cause people to burst into flames and die!

That may be the cause of some 80 bizarre bizarre deaths, says researcher Larry Arnold of the Pennsylvania Research Institute in Harrisburg, Pa.

Arnold says the same bizarre early type was the death of Mary Reeser in St. Petersburg, Fla.

One day, he says, Mary was perfectly well and happy. The next day her landlady found a pile of ashes and her skull, charred and shrunken, in the seat of a wooden bath.

Arnold says it takes 24 hours at 1,000 degree heat to evaporate a body and a human has rarely ever boiled that 1,000 degrees.

UFOs piloted by beautiful people

A pilot and mother said he had an amazing conversation with beautiful members from outer space as they stood beside their UFO.

Maria Lotsi said he was walking by his shop when both where he heard a strange noise.

"There I saw the craft, about at least long and 8 feet high," said Maria, a resident of Preston, England. "A door and a woman were next to it. They were the most beautiful people I've ever seen."

He said both were blond and were slim right pale.

Maria said the woman spoke to him in English and warned him not to reveal certain things he had — particularly the landings on the UFO. There is a reward, understood.

Maria said he'll keep his promise as the space people and never discuss everything he saw or learned that night.

Meteor or missile downed jet liner

Experts say a flaming meteor or a missile were likely culprits in an airliner that crashed killing 61 persons.

That's the only possible explanation for the mysterious crash, said Judge George Applegate in Kansas.

The Indian airliner, a DC-3, disintegrated over the Madhya Pradesh last year — and a lengthy investigation has yet to come up with a cause of the disaster.

Investigators say traces of strange chemicals have been found in the wreckage that indicated there was some kind of an explosion.

They added that simultaneously before the crash a radar operator picked up something flashing near the airplane in the sky.

Chinese Bigfoot fathers human baby

Chinese scientists investigating thousands of new sightings, mass reports have found an astonishing incident in which one of the creatures fathered a human child.

Professor Ivy Minchenong reported the poor creature was born in Mirbeau Province in 1980 after its mother had been married off by a members man — the Chinese name for Bigfoot.

The woman was never able to explain what happened, the professor says.

The child was kept alive for years, he says, but apparently died because of the absence of love and human ghost.

He says secretary state reports go back 2,000 years in China's history — and recently there were an upsurge in sightings among teenagers Jan and says.

World's shortest man is barely 27 inches tall

Today Pete Moore stands only 27 inches tall, but being the world's smallest man hasn't stunted his desire to do all the things any normal man can do.

But after 23 years as a carnival sideshow freak, the 41-year-old dwarf has decided to "take things easy" and enjoy life with his wife and two children.

"I am a pretty active adult and I try to do as many things as I can," Pete told The NEWS. "But my doctor says I won't be able to keep up the pace until I'm 65 and I have to slow down a bit.

Pete was born with an [illegible] disorder that retards [illegible] development. Even [illegible] and can cause discomfort.

Pete and his 5-foot, 8-inch wife, Arlene, have two children, Johnny 11 and Carol 9. Johnny is normal in size but Carol, [illegible], inherited her father's tragic affliction.

But it's little Carol that's also an inspiration for her father's incredible will to live a normal life. She has already braved half the battle.

"There are some things I can't do but I don't like to think about them," Pete said. "But I get along pretty well. I can drive a car, mow the lawn and do odd jobs around the house.

"But I've traveled with the carnival for 23 years. The expense, the long hours and separation are affecting my health."

Now Pete and his wife are thinking about investing their savings in a business and settling down in Wetumpka, Ala., where they own a home.

"I've already lived eight years longer than the doctors said I would," Pete said. "I feel I still have a lot of years left in me. I think it's time to put the carnival life behind me and just enjoy life with my kids."

Swindler rents apartment to 12 couples at same time

A slick con man rented his apartment a dozen times to different, unsuspecting tenants.

But Chris Green of San Jose (Calif.) police says the best man made at least $10,000 in two days on the brazen gamble.

Chris says the swindler, who gave his name as Tom Rubens, rented the place from a couple then moved into a nearby motel and placed a for rent ad in the newspaper. It asked for first month plus a $600 deposit.

The con man told the landlord he was a bargain renter in the neighborhood and people flocked to see the place. The swindler rented the place over and over again — each time collecting $1,800 in cash. He told the victims that the landlord owned checks. By the time people started catching on, the swindler was gone.

Lewis and Clark unlocked America's frontier

William Clark, left, and Meriwether Lewis spent two years on the trail exploring the wild American frontier.

Explorers William Clark and Meriwether Lewis traced a wilderness trail that doubled the size of their young nation.

By JEANE CHIN

Until the historic trek, most of the territory west of St. Louis was shrouded in mystery. It was unmapped and populated only by Indians.

On behalf of their country, Lewis, a brilliant botanist and army captain, and his childhood friend and Clark soldier, frontiersman and leader of men, crossed the continent from St. Louis to the Pacific Ocean.

Traveling for two years by water and horseback, the Lewis and Clark expedition opened American eyes to the vast area the south and the beauty of their own land.

Both Lewis and Clark were natives of Virginia. William Clark was born in Caroline County in 1770. Four years later, in Albemarle County, Meriwether Lewis was born.

At the age of 19, William left home to join the Ohio militia's struggle to protect frontier settlers from Indians. Meriwether left home to join the army of President George Washington's call to volunteer troops to put down the Whiskey Rebellion.

Lewis became a lieutenant in the U.S. infantry, assigned to lead a company of sharpshooters posted to the frontier. Meriwether, a unifying eventually led to the western frontier as well. There, they met and became friends.

In 1794, William resigned his commission and returned to Virginia, to help unravel problems involving his family estate. Five years later, Meriwether, too, left the military. He had been called to Washington, D.C., to serve as private secretary to an old family friend, President Thomas Jefferson.

Meriwether and Jefferson spent many hours discussing the imaginative President's favorite project — a plan to explore the American continent from St. Louis to the Pacific Ocean.

In 1803, President Jefferson asked Meriwether to lead the expedition. Meriwether then called on William Clark to serve at his second-in-command.

On May 14, 1804, the Lewis and Clark expedition left St. Louis. Traveling by boat and canoe, the explorers followed the Missouri River into North Dakota where they spent the winter.

In spring, 1805, Lewis and Clark set out again following the Missouri River west into the Rocky Mountains.

Once across the mountains, the explorers made new canoes and paddled down the Clearwater and Snake Rivers into the Columbia River in the Pacific Ocean.

Lewis and Clark spent the winter near the mouth of the Columbia River. In March 1806, they began the long trek home.

Meriwether took a northern route through the mountains, following the Marias River, while William turned south, following the Yellowstone.

In September 1806, the Lewis and Clark expedition, every member safe, returned to St. Louis. All along the route from St. Louis to Washington the explorers were hailed as great heroes.

President Jefferson named Meriwether governor of Missouri Territory and appointed William brigadier general of the Missouri militia and superviser of Indian affairs.

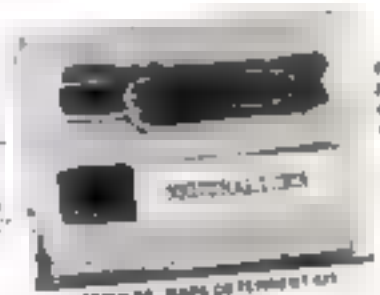
In 1808, during a trip from St. Louis to Washington, Meriwether stopped for the night at a roadside inn in Tennessee. At dawn, the servants found him dying of a bullet wound to his head. No one knows if Meriwether committed suicide or was murdered. The great explorer, dead at 35, was buried near the inn.

In 1813, William took over as governor of Missouri Territory, serving until the territory was granted statehood. After his retirement, William lived quietly as a respected citizen of St. Louis where he died at the age

AMERICA'S GREATEST

Prevent Rape – Wear "Repulse"

New Defense Concept For Women



"REPULSE" is a non-violent rape and assault deterrent. A highly new portable product by law enforcement officials and crime prevention agencies, "REPULSE" provides safe, simple instant protection against rape and assault. It is easy to use and is easily concealed. "REPULSE" can stop a rape before it begins.

The fumes are so strong, they will penetrate the attacker's clothing, making it easy for police to find and apprehend him.

NEUTRALIZER: Once the potential victim has safely escaped the assailant, she can then use the neutralizer, using the swab provided to apply the neutralizer to affected area. No damage done.

How "REPULSE" Works

There is no permit or license required to purchase or wear "REPULSE." It is not a heat gas or mace and therefore is legal in every state.

The concept is simple. Concealed out of sight, a small capsule is placed in the undergarments, shirt or coat pocket. When in danger, the victim firmly squeezes the capsule between thumb and forefinger, releasing an obnoxious, foul odor.

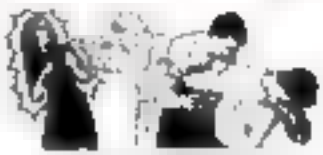
"REPULSE" odor is so repulsive that attacker will flee the scene immediately. It is not necessary for the attacker(s) to come in contact with the substance – simply breath the vapors!

Don't Become A Statistic

Rape is the fastest rising crime in the U.S. — Every female is a potential victim.

Because of the very nature of society, the only person who can prevent rape is the woman herself.

Don't gamble — order "REPULSE" today.



Do not fear the consequences.

Although it is repulsive, but harmless; however, the consequences of attack could be permanent.

THE FACTS:

FACT: Every female, regardless of age, standard of dress, social status, or racial group, is a potential rape victim.

FACT: Government statistics indicate that ONE OF EVERY THREE women, during her lifetime, will become a victim of rape or assault!

FACT: "REPULSE" can provide 24-hour protection!

SAFE: "REPULSE" is non-toxic, will not cause any permanent injury.

"REPULSE" was researched and developed by military - police and control laboratory.

"REPULSE" workmanship and material is guaranteed for a life-time period.

A little boy's sacrifice stands between his sister and death

By JANET PAUL

Ten-year-old James McDowell bears a heavy responsibility — the life of his little sister.

Each week he donates the blood that keeps her alive and helps his parents enjoy their pretty seven-year-old daughter just a little while longer.

Michelle McDowell is suffering from a rare, usually fatal, condition requiring frequent blood transfusions.

But since July James has climbed onto a scale in the blood bank in Fresno, Calif., and bravely gone through his own personal ritual of vibes, needles and pain.

Platelets needed by Michelle to make her blood clot are removed from the blood taken from James' right arm.

"He's very happy to help his sister," said the children's young mother, Mrs. Margaret McDowell. "He knows very well her life depends on him.

"She's allergic to platelets [illegible] give up his favorite sport — baseball.

He had to stop playing [illegible] because of the risk of sports injury. Mrs. McDowell explained.

If he was hurt and unable to give blood for just one week, Michelle could die.

Doctors at the University of California have diagnosed Mrs. McDowell the only surviving [illegible] Michelle is a [illegible] transfusion. But the doctors must rather trust a brother or sister with compatible platelets — and only 25 percent of the children is compatible.

Only one in every 100 people get over the condition without the transfusions — so little Michelle's chances of ever growing up are extremely slim.

We're trusting God to help us because there's nothing more we can do. Mrs. McDowell explained.

Michelle McDowell gives her brother James a warm thank you kiss as he proudly holds up his blood bank certificate.

You can lose $ by buying in bulk

A shopper who wants to save should beware of buying in bulk — it could actually cost you money.

If you purchase a year's supply of a product at what seems a bargain price, what will you do if another brand appears that's even cheaper?

Once I thought I'd found an unbelievable buy when I got a huge size bottle of ketchup on sale for 39 cents.

I bought 12 bottles and lucky, six years later, I still have one left.

Using store sales circulars and mail-order offers I've estimated about one free bottle of ketchup a month — so I actually wasted money on those 12 bottles of ketchup.

I still buy some products in bulk, but only when the cost to me is nothing or nearly nothing. When you combine sales, coupons, and manufacturers' special offers, you can often end up with super buys using 13 boxes of a product for the cost of one.

The following offers are limited to one per household and are valid throughout the United States unless otherwise noted.

Amazing new car runs on ordinary cooking oil

Michael Shelby has come up with an amazing automobile that runs on vegetable oil.

A lot of people have converted diesel engines to burn the kitchen commodity at low cost and get high mileage. It can be used in almost any car.

His vegetable oil car gets an incredible 29 miles a gallon on the highway and 40 in town — a lot for the car's heavy 3,600 pounds.

The 28 year old automotive engineer from Oak Hill Fla., worked with a team of people like all.

The amazing is that engine is standard engine requiring no diesel or kerosene. Total cost for conversion is less than $1,000.

"It eliminates the need for super gas, as that's a scarce commodity," he said. "We put in our own pistons, camshafts, pump drive sprockets and injectors.

But the big savings, he said, is using vegetable oil instead of gasoline. In fact, he believes it's the answer to America's energy shortages.

The oil can be produced cheaply right in this country from many sources — corn, sunflower seeds, safflower seeds, olive and other commodities. And it would sell at the pump for about 20 cents a gallon.

"There's no smoke, no pollution and no foul odor," Shelby said.

The auto industry is studying the American public to learn if they have to go to smaller cars to save gas. But with a diesel engine and vegetable oil, you can enjoy the biggest cars ever made.

He said that running on oil is a subject that many companies have put a great deal of time to study in efforts to find replacements for gasoline. Shelby converted cars from Oak Hill to New York.

Shelby became aware of the automotive potential a few years ago as head of the team that developed a turbocharged diesel car.

Mike Shelby shows his vegetable cooking oil car. The Datsun 2 gets 29 miles a gallon.

3-year prison term for $1.55 theft

A man has been ordered to serve three years in prison for stealing a can of motor oil, valued at $1.55. But he said disappointed.

"The poor devil. I have no idea what he'd done. I want to know," said public defender James Doherty, his attorney.

William Redlich, 41, had served two months of a one year probation for stealing a can of motor oil from a Country Club, Chicago, and was on two years probation for entering an unlocked auto parts store and stealing the additive.

But the Illinois Supreme Court overturned that sentence, ruling that the district judge lacked the authority to place Redlich on probation.

Redlich's conviction then was overturned, but he was given a three year prison sentence. He was released after serving two months.

Super shark repellent found

An incredible shark repellent has been found. And it's so amazing that it will make a big splash in the water. Even hungry great white sharks in search of food will turn away. It is a device to protect swimmers from both humans and sharks. It differs from a fish that lives in the Red Sea.

Actress Arlene Dahl reveals: Astrology guided my career

Arlene Dahl worships her husband is astrology

Glamorous Arlene Dahl says she's been a successful film star and beauty expert because of astrology.

"Stars have guided my career," she told The NEWS. "I don't start anything on a waning moon. The farmers never do either."

Arlene also said she has waited for Mercury and Jupiter to sit right before taking major steps in her glittering career.

She also said, "Knowing the signs of other people has made it very easy for me to get along with people. I know how to please them and I know how to get around them."

So far, Arlene has been able to get around five husbands, including two actors, Fernando Lamas — father of TV star Lorenzo Lamas — and Lex Barker, Texas oilman Christian M. Holmes, Hollywood's Bohaum, and wine importer Alexis Lichine.

While some she might have paid only casual attention to the stars, Arlene began to believe she had some kind of special insight after her prediction that Ronald Reagan would become governor of California came true.

"Kasey and I were sitting next to each other at the Santa Beverly Hills hairdressers. Then just came back from England where, for fun and to pass the time on a movie set, I had picked up a copy of 'Tea Leaf Reading at a Glance.' Somehow, the subject came up while Nancy and I were talking, and she asked me to read her leaves.

"Among other things, I said I saw a California bear on the lead logs and a California flag.

"Three weeks later Nancy called me and [illegible] a marvelous and [illegible] week. They were dinner for governor."

Describing her latest book, "Beyond Beauty," she said "I write about beauty, health and success, the stuff and how to make good things happen.

She has not been without heartbreak, but adds you experience the ups and downs you can't appreciate the good."

Arlene feels a guiding star on her since her mother died.

"I feel her spirit has been close to me and I've been lucky," she said. "Most things have come to me by fate. I've had difficult things to deal with in life but most recently I've used [illegible] to bring [illegible]

Success has wrecked my marriage, says a heartbroken Loni Anderson

Loni Anderson and Howard Hesseman in a scene from "WKRP in Cincinnati," the show that has shot her to stardom

By ANDREW FORD

Loni Anderson, the sexy star of "WKRP in Cincinnati," blames her meteoric rise to super stardom for shattering her seven-year marriage – one of Hollywood's happiest before their recent split.

"We are trying to work it out but there are a lot of pressures – just the beautiful, fantasy aspects where career has skyrocketed as the sharp-tongued, catwalk-carved seductress on the hit series. "The success of WKRP inevitably put a strain on our relationship."

One of her closest friends says Loni is devastated and heartbroken over the split with her husband, Bob Mitchell, an actor whose career has been dismal compared to his wife's success.

"Bob and I talked about marriage for the last five years," said Loni. "We said that if it happened how easily we were going to handle it. But when it happens it is a whole different thing."

The situation became too much for Bob and after an emotional gathering of friends in which they tried unsuccessfully to iron out the problems, he left the Sherman Oaks (Calif.) home they share with Shelby, Loni's daughter by her first marriage.

Loni says it was a total separation, but insiders think the marriage is beyond repair.

Trouble has been brewing in the Anderson household for months now. There were rumors that Loni was having an affair with Burt Reynolds, her co-star in the movie "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," but Loni denies this.

"Success can put a strain on any marriage," she says. "Bob and I have been married for seven years and have been very happy together. We've had our ups and downs, but we've always been able to work them out. Success has put a strain on our relationship, but I don't think it's the end of the world."

Loni and hubby Bob Mitchell as they turned out to help George Burns celebrate his 85th birthday in Beverly Hills in January.

Loni's friends say that Bob has been unable to cope with the pressures of her success. He has been unemployed for the past two years and has been drinking heavily

Boys tell me they would date — if I get a pretty, new face

Dear Babe: I'm an 18-year-old girl who has never been out on a date. Lots of guys have told me that when I get a new face, they will go out with me.

I know I'm not attractive, but surely there are some people in this world who put character and personality ahead of external looks.

I am intelligent and sincere, why don't boys notice that? Don't I deserve some respect, companionship and love from a guy regardless of what I look like? I am not saying myself at all, I just feel girls like me deserve a better evaluation than what we look like on the outside.

Ugly Duckling,
Mt. Joseph, Texas.

Dear Duckling: Just as the ugly duckling of literature turned into a lovely swan, one day you too will appear transformed to a man.

Many young girls feel the same self-pity as you in regard to how/when the next woman to respond.

Even a person "in" looks over that if the latter person looks to be up to expectations. Do what you can to keep yourself as attractive as possible and pay attention to grooming and hygiene. Proper hair and skin care can make any woman look marvelous.

Keep that head young, be-lieve yourself in all ways and it assures you that the right will appear in your life soon.

Dear Babe...

Babe will be very pleased to help anyone who has a personal problem. Just write to: Babe, Weekly World News, 600 S. East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462. Letters will be answered only in this column.

My boyfriend is a drunken bum

Dear Babe: I am 24, my boyfriend is 28. The problem is that when he gets drunk he gets mean. Especially when I try to stop him from drinking.

Instead of taking a cab or my car he goes home and I end up with the family. I drive, and sometimes that I can handle it. I just don't like having the family because I have them too much.

I've thought of breaking up with him, but I don't want to lose him for a stupid reason like that. What can I do?

Troubled over love,
San Antonio, Tex.

Dear Troubled: Drinking has wrecked many marriages, does all other women considered, drunk either of the couple goes too far-reliant to alcohol, the results are usually disastrous.

The same problem in every home because neither you nor your young friend are mature enough to handle the effects of drinking.

I suggest, for your own good, you stop seeing this boy because his problems are just beginning. As it, you have a long way to go the future you may appreciate how damaging alcohol can be in your own future. Stop drinking and concentrate on education, social contacts and the like that's meant in the minds of a manager. You'll never regret it.

Jail bound couple to hit the road

Dear Babe: My husband and I read your column in which a couple looking "about together" had their "shelter, mate-together" lives after their last child had left home. My husband and I discovered that cruising can provide a whole new outlook on life. I want to tell those people to try it for just a week and they will be hooked for good.

Travelers,
Springfield, Texas

Dear Travelers: Thanks for your response. I've forwarded your letter on to the couple so perhaps you can get together and share future travels. Happy trails.

I'm a good boy looking for a girl

Dear Babe: I would like to answer the girl who wrote to your January 6th issue that all boys seemed to want only sex and that the man she met were either on drugs or home. She signed her letter, "Lonely."

Let me tell you, dear lonely, that there are lots of young men out here that are not the kind you have been meeting.

I am 21, I don't smoke, drink or use drugs. There is hope for you as well as for me because there are many good and decent people just waiting to find each other.

If you keep on looking for that special guy, he'll turn up. Be yourself, don't settle for less and never follow the crowd just to be accepted.

Waiting,
Dayton, Ohio

Dear Waiting: I couldn't have said it better.

We want to help your orphaned girl

Dear Babe: We would like to correspond with the girl who wrote you that her father was killed in an accident when she was three and her mother recently passed away. She says she is only 14, and feels alone and scared to death. We can probably help her. We have a 21-year-old daughter who just finished college and has a job. Please forward this letter to her.

Mr. & Mrs. O.L.,
Bedford, Virginia

Dear Mr. & Mrs. O.L.: Many letters of beautiful support poured in for that young girl who has lost both her parents. There were many offers of adopting or caring parents of other children who even offered to pay the girl's way to live with them. Many also offered to send her to school and give her a home as she was sent all over again.

Those generous offers prove to the just how deep the real spirit of the American people lies.

I'm forwarding your letter, along with all the others to her in hopes that she will be able to turn her life around and find happiness and joy. Thank you for your wonderful response.

The fantastic man-made heart-lung engine is the result of more than 20 years of research [illegible] implants in human calves and animals [illegible] the valves and other things.

The successful animal implants established the scientific world and paved the way for the present attempts to create

There is no doubt that an artificial heart can replace a diseased one . . .

life in a dying human. The artificial heart was designed by Dr. Robert K. Jarvik, a research assistant professor of surgery and bio-engineering at the university.

It features two pulsating chambers — made about the natural heart's two ventricles — that are driven by compressed air.

The heart will allow the user to move about in the same freedom that the power system attached to the body by short tubes must be pulled along on a cart.

The user's energy will also have to be linked with an air compressor and smaller air cylinders for emergency use or travel outside the home.

Dr. Jarvik and the research team are now developing a battery which will be totally self-contained except for a thin wire from a battery pack worn on a belt around the user's waist," Miss Gallagher said.

Like the natural heart, the miraculous device is pulsing more than a pump. But like the heart, it must work for a lifetime without failing.

Artificial devices that used a battery heart without totally or permanently replacing it have been used more than 100 times over the past five years.

But a complete artificial heart has been used only once before in 1969 — and then only temporarily when Dr. Denton Cooley of the Texas Heart Institute put one in a 47 year-old man who was on the brink of death. It kept the patient alive for more than 30 hours — the time needed to find a donor for a natural heart transplant.

The stunning reliability of Dr. Jarvik's plastic heart holds [illegible] hope for millions of heart disease sufferers.

The plastic hearts are still proving themselves in animal laboratory at the Medical Center where one has been pulsing [illegible] since April 1973.

"There is no doubt that an artificial heart can replace a diseased natural heart," one researcher said.

And best of all, we now possess the most successful artificial heart in the world."

She faces 17 yrs. for breaking into her own home

An attractive teacher was thrown into jail and now faces 17 years in prison — for breaking into her own home.

Roberta Kaplan, 41, was arrested after she entered to her Bellmore, L.I., home from the supermarket and found her estranged husband Donald there.

The 43-year-old salesman — who had moved out eight years before — was changing the locks.

The couple argued, and Donald sent for the police. When the officers arrived he showed them a court order giving him exclusive use of the family home.

"The cops wouldn't let me in the house," Mrs. Kaplan said. "I had nothing but the clothes on my back."

She returned the next day and entered through a rear window, thinking her husband was out.

But Kaplan was there — and after a violent argument, the police arrived a second time.

Mrs. Kaplan was jailed and charged with burglary, assault, and possession of burglar tools (a pair of pliers).

Burt Reynolds rushes to dry poor Raquel's tears

Guess who gave Raquel Welch is gushing tears of joy despite the fact she was canned from the cast of "Cannery Row." And why not? All of Tinseltown is rallying to her support over the coolly cruddy deal MGM slipped her. Even hedonistic-eyed he-hunk Burt Reynolds — who once sent flowers to Raquel's shutter when she broke her wrist during the shooting of "Kansas City Bomber" — knows a butch cop when he sees one. So he put aside the dead that began with their 1971 filming of "Fuzz" and sent the blonde Vesuvius a chummy wire: "He told me to 'Keep your chin up.' Raquel bubbled gushingly. "It was just so fantastic of him to do that." — Marilyn Beck

Gossip birdies are tweeting over what looks like a smashing romance twixt smoky-eyed sultress Lauren Hutton and tawny Harry Guardino, her co-star in the new play "Woman of the Year." That's the musical adaptation of the 1942 film that starred Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy. Hooked on Broadway Lauren and Harry seem to have a lot more in common with Judy and Spence did than just playing their scenes in a distant tri-state. It could be history repeating itself — when Lauren and Harry check out, it looks like it's for real. — Lee Smith

Speaking out of yesteryear Marlene Dietrich, who's never known for minding words when mulled — is raising a typical stink over the play "Piaf." Though the play opened in England more than a year ago the 75-year-old ex-film great is still hot demanding that backers stop showing her life on the stage. The Dietrich-Shakespeare play portrays Marlene as one of the few sympathetic characters. "She can't understand why she is suddenly complaining about it," moaned her agent, Robert Lantz. "She hasn't even seen it." A friend said it maligns her. — Rona Barrett

Elizabeth Ashley, who penned the award-winning stage play "Portrait of Emily," is now looking ahead to hopes of bringing the family-oriented relationships of Rose Kennedy to the stage. "Portrait of Emily" garnered the coveted Pulitzer Prize award as the best drama of 1976 and she could have another winner in the Kennedy clan given the go-ahead nod. — Maggie Daly

Young hero saves 5 people from a raging house fire

Michael Curtis compliments his courage with humility.

A brave 12-year-old boy saved five people from a raging predawn fire and astounded firemen with his clear thinking in the emergency.

Michael Curtis was delivering newspapers on his route in Southport, Ind., at 6 a.m. when he saw smoke billowing from a second-story window.

"I pounded on the door, but I couldn't wake anybody up," the seventh grader told The NEWS. "So, I ran across the street to call the fire department."

Then the youth awakened Jean Stanley.

"I couldn't find my glasses, and I was really rattled when he told me about the fire," she said. "But he stayed so calm and he made me calm."

Then, Michael ran back to the burning duplex.

"By now, there were flames coming out of the bathroom window right above the door where I was pounding," Michael said. "At first they were afraid, but they kept getting bigger and bigger.

"I was pounding and pounding until I was afraid no one would wake up.

"There were flames right above me, and we kept knocking and pounding on the door and finally the women came down."

At last, a 37-year-old mother, Rhonda Murray, and her teenage children came downstairs. Michael got one of the youngsters, 13-year-old Robert, to help him rouse the other people in the burning duplex.

"I was so afraid something bad was going to happen — like they wouldn't get out in time," Michael said.

He had good reason to be afraid.

"That fire was really spreading fast," Perry Township Fire Department Prevention Director Charles Pressler told The NEWS.

"We got there in five minutes and we could see the smoke from three blocks away.

"When we arrived, the fire was still pretty small, but by the time we got the door in it, the flames were high.

"With a fire spreading that fast, Michael's calm head and clear thinking were crucial. A few more minutes and there would have been some fatalities. There's no doubt in my mind that he saved some lives.

"And he was so modest about it. He asked if we were through questioning him because he had papers to deliver and if people didn't get their papers, they'd be calling and wondering why."

One man's debts at $600 billion

A man has piled up an indescribable debt of billion in debts and has filed for bankruptcy.

That's about two-thirds the amount of the national debt — billion. And Utah federal court officials say it's the largest bankruptcy case on record.

Creditors in E. Sterling Hunsaker, 56, of Kearns, Utah, really have something to fight about. The man's assets are listed as a measly $7,210, until the debts total a staggering $[illegible].

The bizarre situation started when Hunsaker devised a plan to build a cement plant that would use wood and tar as fuel. He said he had a new method of recovering natural gas, oil and gold from tar-sand deposits — a plan major oil companies rejected as too expensive.

So Hunsaker formed a group of his company to a Panamanian based trust company that was to help raise $[illegible] million for the cement plant.

The trust company issued gold certificates and bonds against $3 untouched mining claims owned by Hunsaker. They weren't supposed to be redeemed for 30 years, but unknown suddenly began demanding payment and suing him.

Many people are suffering from a bizarre overeating sickness

A lot of people try to cope with emotional problems by stuffing themselves with food — and then purging themselves with laxatives.

This bizarre disorder is called bulimarexia, said Dr. Gordon Salyer of Shaughnessy Hospital in Vancouver, Canada, at an inquiry.

And he said some bulimarexics in extreme cases have been known to gulp down and throw up 15 pounds of food a day.

Hypnosis and psychiatric counselling seem to be the best means of curing the malady.

Breast feeding prevents pregnancy

An astonishingly very simple method of natural birth control is available to new mothers — breast feeding.

It is the principal way in which nature regulates the fertility of all primates," said Dr Roger Short at the Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh.

African mothers who practising chest feeding for periods of two years between babies, he said.

But those who have abandoned breast feeding for formula diets have experienced surprising results. For example, one such woman had six children by her fifth birthday.

How to protect the sleepwalker

Children usually outgrow sleepwalking — but until they do parents should be prepared to prevent dangerous accidents.

Here are the tips offered by Pennsylvania University College [illegible] sitter.

• Put secure locks on doors and windows.

• A sleepwalker's bedroom should be on the ground floor to prevent falls from high windows.

• After the child is returned to his room, or gently guided from bed. An alarming film might cause fright or confusion.

When growth of his nervous system catches up with the rest of his body, the night walks probably will stop.

Pill now legal without parent okay

Girls under 18 can now get The Pill legally — without their parents' permission.

That's how the U.S. Supreme Court ruled when it rejected an appeal of a lower federal court. The suit brought by Massachusetts parents had claimed a constitutional right to know if their daughter was being prescribed contraceptives.

Many nose jobs are repeated

Cosmetic surgery often has to be repeated because of dissatisfied patients.

Dr Peter McKinney of Northwestern University Medical School, Chicago, reported that of the patients who had nose jobs, 11 percent were so unhappy that they demanded a redo.

New drug helps herpes victims

A new drug called Ribo to victims of herpes simplex — a virus with no proven cure.

The ulcers healed twice as quickly when treated with acyclovir, in a three-year study of hundreds of patients, said Dr Kenneth Arndt of Beth Israel Hospital, Boston.

Sugar can heal cancerous ulcers

Cancerous breast ulcers can be healed by sprinkling them with sugar.

A Middlesex, England, doctor reports this curious method works because sugar draws fluid from the lesions and stops bacterial growth.

He recommends powdered sugar rather than granulated.

Danny Thomas blasts ratings for killing off good TV shows

By ODD JAXON

Superstar Danny Thomas says the television rating system is destroying great programs before they're given a chance — and he wouldn't try to produce another series because of it.

That comes from the guy that produced such series as the "Andy Griffith Show," "Dick Van Dyke Show," "Joey Bishop Show," "Bill Dana Show" and "Gomer Pyle" — not to mention his own "Make Room For Daddy."

"I'm not interested in producing TV series these days. Most shows don't have a chance. If they don't get good ratings right away, they're dumped — never given a chance," says Danny.

As for his own new show, "I'm a Big Girl Now," it is alive and well and far from the bottom of the controversial Nielsen ratings.

"I've never agreed with the Nielsen ratings system," says Danny. "In my opinion, television doesn't need a ratings system. Many great programs have gone down the drain because of the system.

"If the networks have faith in a group, they should say, 'We're going to go with this show regardless of anything and everything.'"

He's also upset over the fact that today's television programs have many sponsors devoted to what major advertisers.

"And many of these sponsors are peddling products such as deodorants and mouthwash," he says. "Do you think I'd ever let a sponsor dictate medicine for diarrhea on my old series, 'Make Room For Daddy'?" asks Danny.

"Back in the old days, the great successes were those programs where the sponsors, ad agencies and network people got their heads together and decided that the shows were palatable, delicious fare. If the programs didn't get high ratings right away, they'd decide to give the shows a chance and let them build. Not today. If the program doesn't succeed immediately, it is dropped."

Thomas' company is planning to produce movies, one of which named "Stang," will have Danny playing an old Armenian. "I wanted them to change the script to make it read 'an old Lebanese,' which I am, but they wouldn't go along. The film will be a comedy-drama, and I've heard that both George Segal and Dean Delouise are interested in starring in it."

Another thing that Thomas dislikes about television is the bitter competition.

"Normally," he says, "when Beatrice actors are always pulling for one another, hoping for their success and happiness. But in the sickness of TV, one person's success on the medium means two persons failure. In other words, if our show is a hit this year, then the competitors will fail and be out of work. So on others, you're rooting that some other actors will fail. And that kind of feeling isn't displayed in any other facet of show business."

Thomas frankly admits that his current series, "I'm a Big Girl Now," is a long way from "Make Room For Daddy."

"That program took as much time," he says, "but until the last five years of 'Make Room For Daddy' would the viewers allow me to be seen sleeping in the same bed as my wife.

"I think some of the modern TV programs go overboard sexually. I don't think middle America likes a lot of these sexy themes. It's possible our show is hampered as with the many baggage around because the daughter (Sharon Cassidy) is divorced and the father (Thomas) is a divorcé.

It's not something I care for or want to promote," he says.

In many shots of the show I agree that we have dialogue on the show that we would never have had on 'Make Room For Daddy' but we're living in a different age. We're just as Victorian as we established as in the olden days. What you see on our show is real life.

He's quick to confirm that he dislikes the divorced aspect on the show.

Actor Danny Thomas hates TV's rating system.

Virgo persons should pay special attention to children near business you have made a gentle, caring side of yourself.

LIBRA

Sept 23-Oct 22

That high cycle of romance that's kept you happy as a lark the past few weeks fades slightly now. Libra, as you turn your attention to finances. Now is a great time to reevaluate a long term investment, but don't have those hasty partial dollars on Wednesday.

Be especially careful. And avoid travel if possible and watch yourself at home and work.

SCORPIO

Oct 23-Nov. 21

That upbeat cycle that started last week continues through this and you're ready to tackle the world, Scorpio. March ex. Your self-confidence will serve you well.

Social events scheduled now will be a big success. Treat yourself to a new dress or suit. But do exercise self-control in matters of the heart or your passionate reckless nature will lead to trouble.

SAGITTARIUS

Nov 23-Dec 21

Travel signs are favorable now, Sagittarius, and even a spontaneous weekend trip could provide memories to last a lifetime. Your desire for romance needs a slight nudging at the moment to be fast-forcing as you.

Toward the end of the week, you may feel like a knight with who has many things to juggle. Don't take your responsibilities out on those close to you.

CAPRICORN

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

The unexpected challenges that hit you in the face the past few weeks have been resolved. Thanks to your careful, practical decision-making ability. But watch out that your enthusiasm don't crush those who remained loyal during the rough times.

This is a great week. Capricorn to spring-time romance-shape at home. Cook a special meal for someone you love or surprise her with flowers.

AQUARIUS

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

A strange circumstance may come over you this week, Aquarius, and you'll long to see an old friend or relative from whom you've been separated. Restore the friendships.

And with your mind on friendships, you will be taken unawares as a legal or financial problem that has been bugged down in red tape suddenly clears up and you'll have less to cheer about.

PISCES

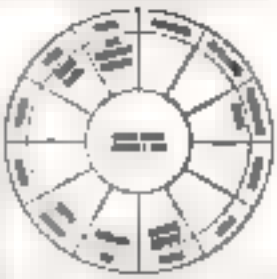
Feb. 19-March 20

You're breathing rarefied air. Pisces, in this your birthday cycle. There's blue sky behind those cotton candy clouds and your dreamy romantic nature is in full bloom.

Work hard now that everything is on your favor and you'll be rewarded as the job. Someone is out around the corner, so get ready with a new hairdo a sassy spring outfit or a fun date.

This week's birthday

DINAH SHORE MARCH 1, 1921 PISCES



Dinah Shore, the popular television talk show hostess, will be 68 this year. She was born Frances Rose Shore in Winchester, Tenn., on March 1, 1921. She's a Pisces, with some fiery Aries influences from Venus and Mars.

With her moon in Sagittarius, Dinah can find very positive interest, leading to fulfillment and travel on the spur of the moment.

She likes her intuition to guide her to objectivist positions. The Pisces-Sagittarius sun and moon combinations make for deep intellectual thought and also give her a great, fat sagittal system.

Mercury and Uranus both in Pisces give her powerful psychic abilities and the possibility of having "healing hands."

The interesting note of Dinah is expressed in the powerful an Gemini of Venus and Mars both in Aries.

She has an extremely violent temper and an one to overcome in her teaching, since her anger flares.

She has sometimes tends to be stubborn. Be cautious in the area but be tactful. This will prevent sparks her love is set.

Jupiter in Virgo makes her standards extremely high. She is apt quick to make friends. With Saturn in Virgo she is apt to be somewhat of a hypochondriac.

Neptune in Leo makes Dinah enthusiastic.

Dinah is extremely strong-willed and independent because of the Aries influence, but with the Pisces influence she is giving, wealth contemplations and psychic. A very diverse woman, and one who has a vision into the practical realities of the world, and the inner realities of the soul.

Astro Match Ups

Scorpio female — Taurus male

Fellows either love or hate this girl and you would be dumb find the Taurus feeling off if she tried to run the show with her usual ferocity.

She'd retreat even faster if she made any effort to hook a ring in his nose. His self-interior might lost her into thinking he needs someone to supervise his life.

Fortunately for her, the female Scorpio is generally a quick reader of people and just before Taurus bores his retreat she might stop buttering him with apologies.

This could be a very shaky relationship to begin with and it may never get off the ground. But those two have a better chance at a longer lasting relationship than most combinations. They are both basically passive at times, both strong and fiercely loyal.

Of course they do have differences. She may look down her nose at his materialism. He enjoys sentimental attachments — sounds, people, things, buildings and trinkets.

They should balance each other well as the financial department. Both enjoy saving and spending naturally and each will be equally pleased at the unselfish attitudes of the other. His tenacious will take a lot of the edge out of the Scorpio and leave her with more time for serious accomplishments.

A very strong match up, tangling a "good" 40th out of all 144 combinations. You should find out about yourself!

For an analysis of any relationship, send two m/f birthdates, a stamped, self-addressed envelope and $3 for a three-page or $5 for a six-page analysis with all 144 ratings to Skip Fielding, 400 Hillridge Dr., Laguna Beach, Calif. 92651.

Two kidneys from the same donor save the lives of identical twins

The lives of identical twins John, left, and Joseph Smith were saved after they received a kidney from the same donor.

The lives of identical twins Joseph and John Smith were dramatically saved after they received a kidney from the same donor on the same day.

The 48-year-old Baltimore kid... brothers came down with high blood pressure and kidney disease 20 years ago, and since then their medical records have read like carbon copies.

"We are almost clones," said Joseph from his hospital bed at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

"If I cough down with the flu, he comes down with it. We can't be what one gets, the other gets it, too."

On January 28, last year, at around two in the afternoon, Joseph became nauseated and weak. Five minutes later, John, who lives near his brother, had the same symptoms.

The families rushed to their doctor's office, and learned that their kidney disease had taken a dangerous turn. It would only be months before their kidneys shut down completely.

By October, the brothers had just a 10 percent kidney function, and their lives hung in the balance.

In the last-ditch struggle to survive, they started dialysis twice a week, six hours at a time.

But it was only postponing the inevitable, only a new, healthy kidney would save them — someone had to die to give them life.

On December 17, at the Social Security Administration where the look-alike brothers work, the happy news arrived.

Two kidneys from a youth who died of a brain hemorrhage could be transplanted that day.

"I was really happy when I heard the news," Joseph said. "I wasn't worried. I figured if they could put men in rockets and get them to the moon, they could give me and John a kidney."

That evening, as the brothers lay in corners of the emergency room waiting for their gift of life, Joseph heard John whistle in the secret code they've used since childhood.

"I knew he was going in, and I whistled back to wish him good luck," he recalled.

Joseph was operated on later. Both operations took four and a half hours and were completely successful.

The brothers are recuperating and looking forward to going back to work.

"It truly was a gift of life from God," said John.

"It has given me a different perspective on life," added Joseph. "I have started enjoying each day and am grateful for each day I have on this Earth."

According to transplant surgeon Dr. James Burdick no kidney transplant on identical twins has ever been performed at Johns Hopkins.

"I've never heard of it being done anywhere else, either," he added.

Both John and Joseph are doing well, and their new kidneys are functioning normally.

'Sexometer gives go-ahead'

A microchip "sexometer" has been developed to signal to women their fertile and infertile periods, says the British Medical Research Council.

The device, small enough to fit in a necklace or incorporated in a bedside radio alarm, reads the woman's body temperature and gives a green light if the woman is in the "safe period" of her cycle.

According to doctors it is also possible to install an additional circuit to "activate an alternative red light to advise when the optimum phase for conception has been reached."

The device has so far proved to be 100 percent reliable in tests of 900 women.

Researcher tells what celebrities reveal by their smiles

Does your favorite celebrity have a winning smile?

Psychologist Peter Marsh has studied the smiles of thousands of people, including some of the superstars of the entertainment world and has come up with some very surprising findings.

Among them the London researcher revealed are:

• Burt Reynolds. "This smile really works. It's great. It's what I call the characteristic Atlantican actress smile that says: 'Great to see you — have a nice day!' "

• Olivia Newton-John. "A classic successful smile with everything right. Her mouth turns up, her eyes turn up and are bright and the whole effect is that she really likes the people she is looking at."

• Diana Ross. "The mouth is right, but the eyes aren't. It's an unsuccessful smile. It's almost an anxiety smile and it looks staged. It looks as if the photographers had been clicking away at her for a bit too long."

• John Travolta. "A good smile — he's not just opening his mouth and showing his teeth, because his eyes look happy and confident that the people he's looking at like him."

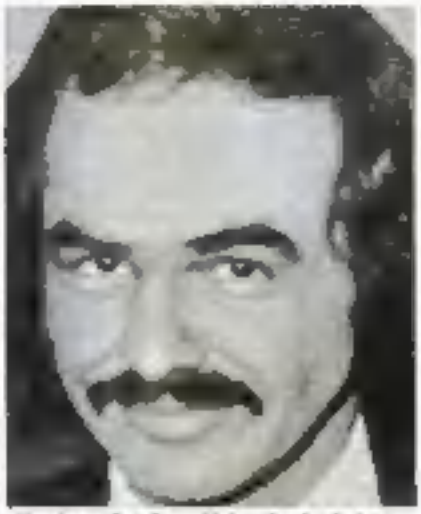
• Debbie Harry of the rock group Blondie. "Although she has her mouth open and is showing her teeth, it is not really a smile at all. This is what you could call a body gesture of calculated coyness."

Peter says a good smile should be quick, genuine and warm. A forced grin won't do it.

"If you want people to like you, the best way is to appear to like them by adopting a friendly smile and an open, relaxed manner toward them," he says.

Peter says if you want to tell if a person's smile is sincere — check the eyes.

"If it is a real smile, they won't help crinkling up the skin around the eyes. If you look at a photograph, all you have to do is forget the lower half of the face to check if the person's eyes are smiling."



Handsome Burt Reynolds has the classic American smile that spans friendships.

John Travolta and his sister, Ellen, both have warm, genuine smiles, according to expert Peter Marsh.

Both are Debbie "Blondie" Harry's very smile contrasts with classic smile of Penny Singleton, the movies' "Blondie."

Olivia Newton-John's winning smile is one to copy if you want to make friends.

Diana Ross has a toothy — but toned — smile because her eyes don't follow through.

Friendly ghost haunts castle & spooks pets

by JOSEPH BOND

A spirit is haunting an old castle and terrifying the pets of the couple who live there. But amazingly, the people have gotten used to its pranks and regard their invisible companion as a comforting, homey friend.

"We're not at all afraid of him," Carol Izzo told The NEWS. "In fact, I kind of like having him around. It's kind of a secure feeling."

"He has been very helpful," she said, explaining that the spirit shuts and latches windows when it starts to rain while no one is at home.

But her flowers, Donald Burlingame, described bizarre reactions in household pets.

One cat went "absolutely berserk," he reported. "It was petrified. He tried to leap through windows and walls and his eyeballs were like saucers. I've raised animals all my life, and I've never seen anything like it."

Inevitably, the weird spectre materialized in front of a houseguest in the picturesque stone castle nestled among trees in New Jersey.

"She was just sitting there and all of a sudden a puff of smoke came from the floor and materialized into a man," Carol said. "It just stayed there for a couple of seconds and then went back down to that puff of smoke."

And it frightened another houseguest by repeatedly opening and shutting an oven door when the ghost was baking a cake. Eerily, it rolled her crank-type car windows up and down over and over again while she watched, stunned.

Carol and Donald are convinced their home is haunted by the ghost of Bill Beatty, who built the castle in the 1920s.

Beatty died in the castle, and his corpse was displayed for mourners in the tower room he had used as an art studio — the same room where bizarre incidents with the household pets have happened.

Donald brought a rocking chair to the tower room, and his normally docile dog became berserker of extreme ire in it.

"You could see her fangs," Donald said. "Her minute tap he wants go back and she would growl and snarl."

Beatty was [illegible] to widower trainer Clyde Beatty, and now couple wondered if that might explain the apparent connection between the animals in the supernatural presence.

Two of the dead man's servants reported seeing his ghost on the castle tower balcony many years ago.

Psychics recently visited the castle and said the spirit is friendly.

The tower room of an old castle is the scene of eerie clashes between animals and the supernatural.

Daisy-picking dozer driver saves a woman's life

Josephine Campbell, her hip crushed in a fall in an abandoned house, was saved from a horrible, grinding death by a demolition worker who paused to pick some flowers.

The worker was about to bulldoze the condemned house into a pile of rubble when he saw a patch of wild flowers and decided to pick them for his wife.

And while gathering the flowers near the rugging foundation of the old house in Mountain View, Calif., he spotted the 81-year-old woman lying on her back in the basement. Sitting quietly at her side was Mrs. Campbell's faithful dog.

She later said she had wandered into the vacant house "out of curiosity" slipped through a hole in the floor and landed outside the basement, smashing her hip and cracking a rib.

She said she had been in the house, barely able to move and numb from cold, for 19 hours!

"I called and called for help, but no one heard me," she said after her terrifying ordeal was over.

"I didn't sleep all that night. I was in too much pain and it was so cold."

Her little dog, who was with her when she fell, leaped down in the basement and never once left her side.

Shortly after 11 a.m., on the morning after Mrs. Campbell had fallen, the worker arrived with his bulldozer to demolish the condemned house. When he found her, he called the fire department. She was taken to a Mountain View Hospital where doctors said she will recover.
